

68TH CONGRESS QUIETLY SLIPS INTO HISTORY

Usual Tensity of Closing Session Missing—Only Big Money Supply Bills Were Enacted.

MAJOR MEASURES FAIL OF PASSAGE

Muscle Shoals, Farm Relief, Railroad and Other Big Bills Were Caught in Final Jam.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Washington, March 4.—With a complete absence of the tensity and spectacular incidents that usually attend a sine die adjournment, the 68th congress passed today into history.

Its calm ending was in marked contrast to the noisy days that had gone before, with their fighting blows, a majority without power to carry out its program, and with attention frequently diverted from legislative channels by spectacular disclosures in numerous committee investigations.

Adjustment brought to a close a three months' session which accomplished only the enactment of routine appropriation bills and a few general proposals, chief among them the postal pay and rate increase act. Measures failing included all the major recommendations of the president's agricultural conference, the Muscle Shoals leasing bill, all important matters affecting railroads, and thousands of others of varying degrees of interest.

Achievements of Session. During the two years it was in existence, congress did enact a tax reduction measure; revised the immigration law, provided for the reorganization of the diplomatic and consular service, and gave veterans of the World war an adjusted insurance compensation.

The final sessions today of the house and senate consumed less than two hours and saw the transaction of very little public business. Convening at 10 o'clock, the house concurred in senate amendments to the naval omnibus bill, while the senate took the last step necessary to send the final deficiency bill to the president.

Retirement from the house of a number of veteran legislators, among them Speaker Gillett, who has passed to the senate after 32 years as a representative, occasioned a round of speech-making during the final hours. There was in the senate, however, no exchanging of felicitations or singing of swan songs.

Senate Closes in Hubbub.

From the start the senate found itself in so much confusion that it was with difficulty that business could be transacted. It was moving around and conversing, and to this hubbub was added the clamors of a dozen or more senators simultaneously seeking recognition to get last-minute action on measures.

Finally, the senate began a series of recesses while waiting for the chief executive and the vice president-elect to reach the capitol for the inaugural ceremonies. Then when they did come back into a final session, time had slipped by so quickly that it was necessary to move back the hands of the clock repeatedly as they would not converge on the noon hour until Charles G. Dawes had taken the oath of office as vice president.

Pay Increase Bill Signed.

During the last hour, President Coolidge set in his room off the senate signing bills, most of which were presented to him there for his approval. The last bill to which the executive attached his signature, however, was one he took with him from the white house. It was the legislative appropriation measure, carrying the increase in salaries for members of congress and the cabinet.

The chief executive permitted this proposal to rest at the bottom of a sheaf of bills, and as the hands of the clock drew nearer and nearer to 11 o'clock, there was apprehension.

Extradition Asked After Indictment Against Sculptor

South Carolina U. D. C. Chapter Head Urges Retention of Borglum and Deplores Trouble.

DEPOSED SCULPTOR TO FIGHT CHARGES

Habeas Corpus Hearing Is Delayed Until Next Week, According to Governor of North Carolina.

Requisition papers for the return from North Carolina of Gutzon Borglum, deposed sculptor of the Stone Mountain Confederate memorial, were issued Wednesday afternoon by Governor Clifford Walker. This action followed return of true bills Wednesday morning by the DeKalb county grand jury charging Borglum with malicious mischief, simple larceny and larceny from the house.

Under the Georgia law larceny from the house is a felony and, therefore, extraditable, whereas malicious mischief, the only charge named in warrants originally sworn out against the sculptor, is a misdemeanor and is not extraditable.

Borglum is under $5,000 bond to appear at a hearing of habeas corpus proceedings in Greensboro, N. C., on Saturday, following his arrest there last Saturday on request of DeKalb county officials. A Georgia official will go to Greensboro for the purpose of serving requisition papers at that time, although Associated Press dispatches late Wednesday quoted Governor McLean, of North Carolina, as stating that he will not grant a hearing on the requisition until next week. The governor is quoted as having said he would take no action in this matter until after the trial at Greensboro on Saturday and the adjournment of the North Carolina general assembly, which also is scheduled for Saturday.

Women Approve Action. Resolutions were adopted Wednesday by the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, expressing complete confidence in the ability and integrity of the executive committee of the Stone Mountain Memorial association. Resolutions were offered to the resolutions committee by Mrs. John K. Otley and were then placed before the entire body by that committee, which includes Mrs. Spencer R. Atkinson, chairman; Mrs. Howard H. McCall, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. John K. Otley, Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin and Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith.

The resolution follows: "Resolved, That the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs expresses complete confidence in the ability, integrity and disinterestedness of the executive committee of the Stone Mountain Memorial association."

A telegram was received Wednesday from Mrs. John C. Coulter, president of the Wade Hampton chapter, U. D. C., of Columbia, S. C., urging retention of Mr. Borglum for completion of the gigantic carving on the face of Stone Mountain. Mrs. Coulter states that the trouble between the sculptor and the association is dampening enthusiasm in a state-wide drive to raise funds for completion of the memorial, now in her state, and urges that the association "tolerate the eccentricities of genius," give Borglum able assistants and retain him for the work.

The requisition papers for the return of Borglum to this state to stand trial on the indictments found against him by the DeKalb grand jury were issued by Governor Walker on request of Solicitor Claude Smith, of the Stone Mountain circuit. At the same time that the grand jury brought in its true bills against Borglum it

DEMOCRATS GET DATA FOR USE UPON COOLIDGE

Comparison Made of Legislation He Recommended and How G. O. P. Congress Killed It.

VIRTUALLY NOTHING DONE ON PROGRAM

Ten Items of Republican Steering Committee Also Disregarded Almost Completely by Its Party.

BY MARK SULLIVAN. Washington, March 4.—The democrats are studying, not the speech that Coolidge delivered Wednesday, but the speech he delivered three months ago to the 68th session of congress when it opened. They are going over it carefully, checking up the specific things Coolidge asked this congress to do and pointing out what congress failed to do.

The exhibit of discrepancy between what Coolidge recommended and what congress did is pretty formidable. Coolidge recommended rigid economy and congress added $2,500 a year to the salary of each member. Coolidge recommended definite farm legislation. Congress did not pass it, and the lower house actually passed a farm measure to which Coolidge was opposed.

Turned Down Muscle Shoals. Coolidge recommended disposition of Muscle Shoals and congress did not dispose of it. Coolidge recommended a most important act for the reorganization of the government departments and congress never even took it up.

Coolidge recommended that America join the permanent court of international justice, and the senate never even took that up. Coolidge recommended legislation to promote railroad consolidation, and congress ignored it.

Further than this, the senate came within one vote of passing over Coolidge's veto the postal pay bill, of which Coolidge had disapproved.

G. O. P. Program Ignored. Having made up this exhibit of discrepancy between presidential recommendation and congressional fulfillment, the democrats go a step further by the program of legislation, which the republican steering committee of the senate, at the beginning of the session, contained 10 items, of which session, gave out as what they proposed to pass. This republican program was actually passed.

Among the more important measures on the program of the republican steering committee which did not pass were the country to turn over the government departments; a provision that constitutional amendments should be ratified by the people instead of by the legislatures; a bill for foreign trade zones in American ports, and a bill affecting national banks, favored by Senator Pepper.

Good Democratic Ammunition. Out of this showing—a congressional failure to follow either the leadership of the president or even the leadership of their own official chiefs within the senate—the democrats make an argument upon which they will, in the coming elections, solicit the country to turn over the government to a party which, as they promise, can function.

Unquestionably, it is good democratic ammunition. Above the only republican answer is that this was not Coolidge's congress. It was the old congress elected before Coolidge became president. By implication, the republicans hold out the idea that the new congress, elected with Coolidge, is the one that Coolidge is responsible for, and that it will be more amenable to his leadership.

As to that, we shall see when the new congress holds its first session. There will be next December, unless Coolidge calls it into special session earlier. Quite possibly the new congress

COOLIDGE IS INAUGURATED; DAWES ROCKS SENATE CALM BY TIRADE AGAINST RULES

SENATORS AMAZED BY FRANK ATTACK UPON OLD CUSTOM

SHOCK TO DIGNITY OF ANCIENT AND AUGUST BODY SO GREAT THAT CEREMONY IS ALMOST STOPPED

REPUBLICAN CHIEFS VISIBLY DISTURBED

President Coolidge Believed To Have Known of Sensational Attack Dawes Had Planned.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER. Washington, March 4.—Just as the inauguration preliminaries were proceeding in the calm, quiet way ordained by President Coolidge, Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes broke in upon the sedate scene Wednesday with a terrific tirade against the senate, which astounded that ancient and august body, and almost stopped the whole ceremony.

No sooner was he sworn in as vice president than the "cussing general," taking his gavel to preside over the senate, delivered a sensational attack against the antiquated rules of that body. Senators were amazed. The distinguished audience of diplomats, cabinet members, supreme court justices, congressmen and select spectators who had filled the chamber, expecting to hear the customary, soothing platitudes, gasped with surprise.

Laughter Fills Senate Chamber. Dawes soon had some of the senators and congressmen laughing. Expecting the usual stilted, restrained address, the audience could not repress its amusement when Dawes began stamping his foot, pounding the desk and swinging his arms to the accompaniment of his high pitched, jerky sentences. Smiles and laughter broke out as the general attacked the leisurely method of senate procedure.

Not content with his assault on the senate rules, Dawes further upset senate custom when he administered the oaths to 24 new senators in one group instead of taking them in batches of three. This further incensed the senators.

Then Dawes capped his performance by failing to reappear to call the senate to order after the president's inaugural address outside the capitol. Senator Watson, of Indiana, assistant majority leader, was obliged to function in the absence of Dawes.

Raps Rules of Senate. But entirely oblivious to the tradition under which vice presidents are customarily sworn rather than heard, Dawes shook his fist at the astonished senators, pounded the desk, stamped his foot, and snapped out in his high pitched voice the most outspoken criticism the senate has ever heard from its presiding officer. He especially attacked the rules which permit almost unlimited debate.

"Were this the first session of the senate," he cried, "the system of rules, unchanged, should be presented seriously for adoption, the impact of outraged public opinion, reflected in the attitude of the senators themselves, would crush the proposal like an eggshell," Dawes declared, shaking his fist straight at the amazed senators.

"Reform in the present rules of the senate is demanded not only by the public, but by the senate itself."

Mongrel Pup, Cavalry Mascot, Is Guest at Inauguration

WIND TOO SHORT, HOWEVER, FOR RETURN TRIP

Washington, March 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—President Coolidge had an uninvited, but not unwelcome guest to his inauguration. More than a score of governors of states either declined invitations or didn't show up, but this particular uninvited guest came early, stayed late, saw the show to the end, and had a very busy time.

He was Ginger, the dog of Troop F, Third Cavalry. Some folks might call Ginger a bulldog. Perhaps he thinks he is one, but he bears without shame on his escutcheon the bar sinister. Ginger made the long trip about from Fort Myer, and arrived feeling pretty good. Ceremoniously he waddled right into the white house grounds, shielded by two of his friends—the horses—and when President Coolidge and Vice President

Dawes came out for the trip to the capitol, Ginger trotted along Pennsylvania avenue with the procession, very important in the knowledge that he was the only dog in the inaugural ceremony.

But life with a cavalry troop makes a dog fat and short winded, and capitol hill almost bushed Ginger. His tongue lolled and his kindly eyes bulged. He failed to catch his breath during the exercises on the capitol plaza and was in a fair way to be out of the return procession to the white house.

It went hard for a cavalry dog to beg a ride from his ancient enemy, an artillery man, but the gunner had a heart and hoisted Ginger to a seat on the caisson. There he rode to the ceremony, and was reviewed by the president and the official party in passing.

Overseer on Rawlings Farm Remanded to Jail Without Bond by Three Justices at Hearing.

Wrightsville, Ga., March 4.—(Special.)—J. J. Tanner, given a preliminary hearing here today before three justices of the peace, was bound over to the Johnson county grand jury which meets March 16, on the charge of murdering Gus A. Tarbutton, on February 17. He was ordered held in jail without bond.

The justices reached a verdict after deliberating a short time, after the hearing closed late today. Evidence was completed at 5:30 and argument consumed two hours. Solicitor Fred Ken was assisted by Judge J. L. Kent in the prosecution. Claxton and Evans represented the defendant. Thomas W. Hardwick did not appear in the case today.

The principal interest today was in the statement made by Tanner, in which he did not vary from his former report of the affair, that Tarbutton was killed by the accidental discharge of a gun carried by Tanner when he stumbled and fell. Tanner related the incidents of the day leading up to the trip to the haunts land, but no deviation was made in his statement of the actual shooting.

Held in Jail. Tanner will be held in the Johnson county jail here until the grand jury meets.

An added feature of interest today was the introduction of a witness to disprove the eye-witness testimony given by Noah Covington. Olin Kendall, a farmer, today testified that Covington, who testified he witnessed the shooting, was seen to pass his home about 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the shooting, the distance being 15 miles from the scene of the killing.

J. J. Tanner was overseer on the farm of C. G. Rawlings, who was freed Saturday in a preliminary hearing before three justices on the charge of being accessory before the fact of the killing.

Lewis Stephens, a negro, who was digging for the bauxite at the time of the killing, is still held as a material witness in the case, and Hal Hooks, chauffeur of Rawlings, who was in the automobile that drove the party

RECOMMENDATION OF MORE ECONOMY FEATURES SPEECH

Inaugural Ceremony Extremely Brief and Simple, in Accordance With President's Wishes.

PRETTY WEATHER GRACES OCCASION

Chief Justice Taft Administers Oath of Office With Old Bible of Coolidge's Grandmother.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Washington, March 4.—Calvin Coolidge calmly and quietly assumed the duties of the presidency today for four more years, and Charles G. Dawes swept into the vice presidency with a velocity that shattered many precedents.

In a brief inaugural ceremony, which never deviated from the decorous program laid down by him long in advance, Mr. Coolidge renewed his oath of office on his grandmother's Bible, and in a short inaugural address restated his policies of governmental frugality.

But General Dawes furnished a succession of surprises and thrills that stirred senatorial ire. First, he read the riot act to the senate on the necessity of revising its rules to outlaw the one-man filibuster. Then, instead of swearing in the new senators in fairs, as was the time-honored custom, he ordered them brought up in a bunch to save time. Then he cut short the ceremony of senators signing the book, and finally, without any senator having made a motion to that effect, he announced that the deliberative body would proceed to attend the inauguration of President Coolidge outside.

Thousands See Ceremony. The senate and its distinguished guest thereupon trooped to a vastly different scene on the east plaza, where thousands already were waiting to see the induction into office of Mr. Coolidge, while millions more all over the nation waited at tuned-in radio sets to hear what he said. The calm, measured tones of his inaugural address were carried to the greatest audience ever addressed by any man. And as his last words ended the brief, simple inauguration, millions heard also the calling of the bugles to set in motion the short inaugural parade which wound up the day.

Back at the white house, under escort of trotting cavalry troopers, the president and his guests took their places in a glass-enclosed reviewing stand to see the passage of the score of governors who had places in the pageant, the marching foot troops, sailors and marines, the rumbling columns of artillery, and a whole herd of squat battle tanks, which had grumbled and rumbled their way up Pennsylvania avenue in a steady thunder.

The service bands in their gay uniforms gave color to the procession as they marched "with trumpets blaring

Longing for "Spirit Kiss" Lands Blacksmith in Ward

PRETTY HEALER ADDLED HIS BRAIN, BELIEF

BY H. O. THOMPSON. Los Angeles, March 4.—A desire to return a "spirit kiss," brought to him by a "kiss butterfly," has taken Victor Pendleton, aged 50, from his blacksmith's forge to a psychopathic ward.

When Aimee Semple McPherson, healer and evangelist, was conducting her services in Denver a few years ago, she employed a religious symbolism and tossed a kiss into the air. The wafted caress was taken literally by Pendleton. He thought it "anointed" him, and that he had been selected to rule the universe with the comely preacher.

Within the last few months, letters, long and illiterate, have arrived at Mrs. McPherson's angelus temple here. Pendleton wanted to return that air-borne kiss.

Trudging home from his smudgy shop, the self-styled "divine counsel" penned his daily messages. They ceased to be amusing, were reported to federal authorities, and the fanciful flights of Pendleton's mind fluttered in religious ecstasies no longer.

CLUB WOMEN URGE BEELER PROPOSALS

Atlanta Federation Favors Plan and Urges City Council To Accept Full Provisions.

BY ERIC KEYSER. Berlin, March 4.—Deserted husbands in soviet Russia are advised to scorn rather than shoot their faithful wives, in the most recent of the numerous soviet books of etiquette.

Above all, a soviet Russian husband must not permit himself to be seduced over a fickle wife. If her misdeeds are aggravated and she flouts his efforts at reconciliation, he must obtain consolation by despising her.

Jealousy is held to be a bourgeois passion, while to feel disgust and abhorrence is good communist ethics. Professor Salkind, of Moscow university, is the author of the latest treatise in good communist manners. While he was about it, the professor added a new restriction to the decalogue.

"Love not the woman of the enemy class," he counsels all good communists. Love, according to Salkind, is a purer passion than can be comprehended by the earthly bourgeois, whose puny minds and spirits, greed for gold and unholy denial of the soviet system of government shut flourishes for the commander-in-chief, but the old familiar trappings of past inaugurations were almost all absent and the whole parade had gone by in little more than an hour.

But despite the simplicity of the ceremony, imposed by the wish of the president himself, Mr. Coolidge took office, this time in his own right by the overwhelming vote of his fellow countrymen, amid scenes strangely contrasting with that other inauguration 19 months ago in his father's home in Vermont.

Then there was need for haste; a great tragedy had set its mark on the nation. A hurried, simple reciting of the oath his father administered that night gave the country a new president almost before word of the death of President Harding could be carried throughout the land.

Wide Contrast Furnished.
Today, that same man succeeded himself as president amid ceremonies that custom has prescribed. It was a calm, orderly process of government. The oath was administered by the chief justice of the United States, himself a former president. It was taken out in the broad light of the sun on the wide plaza where thousands might see. And it was a calm, collected man whose scarcely audible "I do" set the burden of the presidency upon his shoulders for four more years. In voice and manner he was serene and untroubled as he turned then to the vast throng that waited to hear his deliberate, serious address to "my countrymen."

Pauses Long Moment.
As he spoke that salutatory address, Coolidge passed a long moment, looking out over the sea of faces upturned below him from the wide-spread stands and the mass of humanity beyond that filled every nook and corner of the plaza to overflow. Then his eyes dropped to the manuscript before him on the stand and he went on steadily, quietly to his final solemn declaration that America cherishes no purpose "save to merit the favor of Almighty God."

The president spoke almost without gestures. Only twice was the quiet, untroubled cadence of his voice tinged with deep feeling. The evidence of emotion was there as he drew his address to an end, in what was almost an invocation of Divine aid in his task. And it was there, too, when he expounded the doctrine of governmental economy he has made his own.

Economy To Save People.

"I favor the policy of economy, not because I wish to save money, but because I wish to save people," he said.

leaning forward and with voice growing husky just a little in the intensity he put into the words. "The men and women of this country who tell me the ones who bear the cost of the government. Every dollar that we carelessly waste means that their life could be so much the more meager. Every dollar that we prudently save means that their life will be so much more abundant."

As a whole, it was a busy day for the president, but it moved serenely on its appointed way, the tradition of "Coolidge luck" having again asserted itself to bring a spring-like March day for the event so often marred by rigorous weather. He was busy with matters at his office in the white house up to the time that his cavalry escort arrived to lead the way to the capitol. By that time, the way down Pennsylvania avenue was well fringed with spectators.

Given Generous Greeting.
Both Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Dawes were greeted as they rode by the capital, the crowd, due to the curtailment of the usual spectacle by the president's orders, was far below the multitude that have come before to see presidents installed. There were plenty of folks on hand, however, to jam every point of vantage on the roped-off sidewalks, in windows and on high roofs.

In the senate chamber, last minute business having been hurried through, the formal mustering of official guests was in progress. The president's father looked down at the scene from the white house reservation in the gallery as the members of the house trooped in to be ushered to their places. The various governors gathered for the inauguration were on the senate floor, and when Governor Nellie Ross, of Wyoming, came in on Senator Warren's arm, there was much hand-clapping in honor of the sister woman in black.

Rise for Mrs. Coolidge.

A moment later, Mrs. Coolidge came down the steps of the gallery to her place beside her husband's father. The crowded galleries noted her arrival and stood in silent greeting until she had taken her seat.

Below, the formal announcements of distinguished guests were continuous. The diplomatic corps came in two abreast, clad in the glittering uniforms prescribed by custom. Then came the black-robed figures of the supreme court, headed by Chief Justice Taft, and the crowd on the floor and in the galleries stood while the justices took their places. Members of the cabinet were ushered to seats in the well before the desk, and when Mr. Dawes appeared to take his place beside Senator Cummins, there was a burst of handclapping which grew into a thunder of applause a moment later when Mr. Coolidge came to the center aisle and took a seat at the front, surrounded by his uniformed military and naval aides.

Dawes' Inauguration Simple.
Inauguration of a vice president is a simple process. Senator Cummins, as president of the senate, read the brief oath and as Mr. Dawes made his pledge, the hands on the big clock were revolving to the noon hour after having been set back several times to meet the delay of getting the officer, to congratulate him on his election. Both grinned as the galleries and other senators laughed.

Diplomats and members of the supreme court had to maintain their stiff poker faces during the Dawes' inaugural address. While senators, congressmen and the galleries laughed at will, they were compelled by the proprieties to look deadly serious and register no feeling of either approval or disapproval.

The only monochrome in the great throng at the capitol was that worn by the Belgian ambassador, Baron de Cartier de Marchienne.

Charles B. Warren, nominated for attorney general, but not yet confirmed by the senate, was not to be seen at the inaugural ceremonies. If he were there, he hid himself in the crowd. Retiring Secretary of Agriculture Gore also was absent from the group of cabinet members. He was being sworn in as governor of West Virginia.

Frank B. Kellogg, new secretary of state, sat as an ex-senator in the senatorial section instead of with the cabinet. He takes the oath of office Thursday.

Dawes drew a laugh when, after entering the senate chamber, he sat down while all others remained standing to await the entry of the president. He grinned and rose when he discovered his mistake.

Aide of the scarlet uniforms of the marine band, the brightest touch of color at the ceremonies was supplied by the diplomatic corps. The ambassadors and ministers appeared in full dress, plumed hats and flashing medals.

La Follette, of Wisconsin, was the only able-bodied senator absent from the inaugural ceremonies. He is resting in Florida. Senator Greene, of Vermont, who was shot accidentally in a bootlegger's street chase a year ago, was unable to attend.

One of the busiest men in the senate was Colonel Eddie Halsey, who officiated as official timekeeper. He had to turn the great clock back three times to prevent congress from expiring before it finished some routine matters. The last time he permitted the hands to move around to one minute after 12 o'clock before he caught them. He pushed the clock back 15 minutes while the crowd laughed. Cummins, presiding officer, tried to preserve the fiction when, as the regarded hands pointed to noon, he rapped the knell of this congress by declaring:

"The hour of 12 o'clock having arrived." He was interrupted by laughter.

Mrs. Coolidge appeared far from awe-struck when she took her seat in the senate gallery under the gaze of the crowded chamber. She nodded to friends in opposite galleries and once raised her hands and clasped them in a solitary handshake when she recognized a friend. She spent much of the time waiting down on the senate trying to identify the baldheads below.

Mrs. Nellie Ross, governor of Wyoming, drew a hand when she entered the senate chamber on the arm of Senator Warren, of Wyoming. She was dressed in mourning for her husband, who died just before she was elected.

Senator Bursum, of New Mexico.

Listening In On Inauguration

BY UNITED NEWS.

Washington, March 4.—The first senator with whom Vice President Dawes shook hands after being sworn in was Brookhart, of Iowa, who during the campaign demanded that Dawes resign from the ticket. Brookhart was the first of the re-elected senators to be sworn in, and it was the duty of Dawes, as presiding officer, to congratulate him on his election. Both grinned as the galleries and other senators laughed.

Only two old-fashioned Prince Albert coats were observed among the flapping tails of the cutaway morning coats worn by most senators. Cole Blaise, new South Carolina senator, and Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, were the only ones who wore the square coats. Senator Goff, of West Virginia, wore a great Ascot cravat and a huge horseshoe stick pin.

Frank B. Kellogg, new secretary of state, spent a few minutes before the inauguration ceremonies cultivating Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, who is likely to be his chief trouble-maker. Kellogg sat in the senate chamber with his arm around Borah, talking earnestly with the Idaho senator.

Kellogg held a reunion of the old Harding golfing foursome of which he was a member when he met Capper, of Kansas, and Hale, of Maine, on the floor. Former Senator Frelighusen, of New Jersey, another Harding intimate, was a guest on the floor during the vice-presidential ceremonies.

Speaker Gillett Defends House In Vaedictory

Washington, March 4.—In a vaedictory speech in the house today, Speaker Gillett, who later took the oath as senator from Massachusetts, declared he would "rather be speaker of the house than hold any other position in the world."

Replying to addresses by Representative Longworth, of Ohio, the republican leader, who will succeed to the speakership at the next session, Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, the democratic leader, and Representative Snell, of New York, and Tilson, of Connecticut, republicans, Mr. Gillett declared "it was no ambition or initiative of my own" that led him to relinquish the post.

Declaring that oratory "is perhaps less fervent and effective" now than a generation ago, he expressed the opinion that the late Representative Bourke Cockran, of New York, was one of the greatest orators he had known in his 32 years as a member of the house.

"I think the house has less tolerance than formerly for second rate oratory, for the man who aims at the effect without the genuine qualification," he continued. "What really gives a man influence today is a fund of knowledge."

"Possibly the house is not as brilliant as it was 30 years ago. It is certainly not as dissipated. It does more work in my opinion. The average ability, industry and serious devotion to duty is higher today than when I came."

Defending congress against peculiar fables, he explained that "it is expected to put into concrete and definite form, by legislation, the hazy and contradictory ideals of the people, and as realization generally falls short of expectation, so congressional action must always be disappointing."

Senator Caraway's small son trailed him around the chamber. The lad made a chain of paper clips and hung them on his father's coat tail.

INAUGURATION DAY OBSERVED IN PARIS

Paris, March 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—Inauguration day was celebrated in Paris with a speech by Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, at a luncheon of the society of "Friends of France." President Doumergue sent his congratulations to President Coolidge and the American chamber of commerce stood for a moment in silent tribute, and then forwarded greetings to Washington.

Ambassador Herrick quoted from Secretary of State Hughes' speech of last Monday, then said: "The sun is shining this inaugural day, which is contrary to custom. I venture to hope that the new era, of which the secretary of state spoke, will be inaugurated under President Coolidge's new administration."

The luncheon, over which Ambassador Herrick presided, was given for the Anglo-American press, and in the course of his remarks the ambassador said:

"It is evident to me that there has been a persistent and articulate desire to achieve better things in journalism. Not the least of these efforts has been directed to effecting a more comprehensive international understanding and consideration of problems of world importance."

"Journalism happily is no longer obliged to sadden itself with endless accounts of human vice. The time has arrived to advance to higher estates."

Referring to Secretary Hughes' speech again, he declared: "The press will be a vital factor in the realization of this endeavor."

SALE OF MISSISSIPPI RAILROAD APPROVED

Jackson, Miss., March 4.—Sale of the Gulf and Ship Island railroad to the Illinois Central railroad was finally approved in a formal order today by the state railroad commission, which removes the final legal obstacle to the merger.

The commission issued a statement to the effect that the order was "clear and without strings," so tentative agreements for the transfer of the line, it is expected, will be completed at an early date.

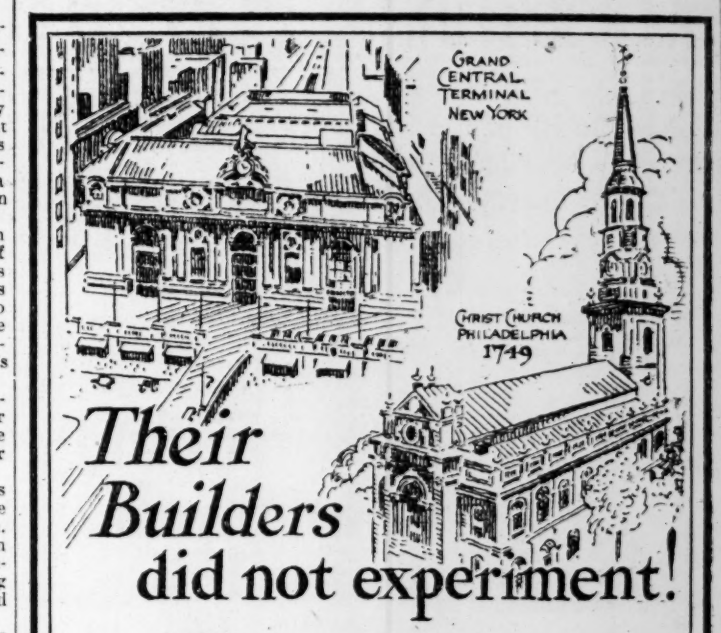

Consideration of the leasing of the Alabama and Vicksburg railroad to the Illinois Central was not considered at today's meeting of the commission.

There are now 1,255,000 motor-cars in the world.

8 Inaugurations Within 9 Years Coolidge's Mark

Washington, March 4.—With the swearing in of Calvin Coolidge as 30th president of the United States, a new inaugural record has been hung up at which politicians may shoot at will, but with doubtful results. It is the president's eighth inauguration in nine years. Beginning in 1916, Coolidge has been inaugurated three times as lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, twice as governor, once as vice president of the United States and now twice as president. In those nine years it has been nearly an annual event for Mrs. Coolidge to witness the swearing into office of her husband. Such is the unique record of the man who started his political career a few short years ago as mayor of Northampton. Such has been the success of the novel policy of silence in the name usually associated with buck-slapping, free talk and free promises. Simplicity has been the keynote of all of the Coolidge inaugurations. He may feel that when they come so often, there is no use making so much of them.

Washington, March 4.—Approximately 300 camera men, the greatest number ever gathered for the event, clicked off hundreds of pictures of the Coolidge inaugural ceremonies today, while 18 commercial airplanes were on hand to rustle to various points throughout the country their record of the day's proceedings.

WAR DEPARTMENT CLERK DROPS DEAD OF HEART DISEASE

Washington, March 4.—Exhausted after standing in the chill air during the inauguration exercises in front of the capitol, Nathaniel L. Terry, 60-year-old clerk in the war department, fell dead from heart disease here Wednesday shortly after the ceremonies were completed.

BALL FOR CHARITY PROVES SUBSTITUTE TO INAUGURAL BALL

Washington, March 4.—Although President Coolidge ruled against an inaugural ball, Washington society and the visiting dignitaries of the states found a substitute tonight in a charity ball at the Mayflower hotel.

Vice-President and Mrs. Dawes, cabinet officials, senators and representatives and ranking officers of the army and navy attended, along with most of the governors who had come to the capital for the inauguration ceremonies.

The personnel of the distinguished gathering was about the same that would attend an inaugural ball—with the president and his wife left out.

COOLIDGE TO OMIT SENDING CABINET NAMES TO SENATE

Washington, March 4.—Departing from the custom of some presidents entering their second term, President Coolidge will omit sending to the new senate the nomination of hold-over cabinet members, except in the case of Postmaster General New.

All cabinet appointments are indefinite except that of postmaster general, which must be made anew at the beginning of each administration.

The only other nomination to be sent to the senate will be that of Charles B. Warren to be attorney general. The senate refused to act prior to March 4. Nominations of Secretary of State Kellogg and Secretary of Agriculture Jardine have been confirmed.

The London and North Eastern railway will build 205 locomotives and 521 passenger and 11,700 freight cars, and four through and nine suburban passenger services, renew lines on 7,000 miles of road and improve stations, the total cost being $30,000,000.

$24,500 Given by County To City Education Board

Fulton county commissioners Wednesday afternoon appropriated $24,500 to the Atlanta board of education to be used in grading work on school property of the city, and an additional $500 to aid in the construction of an athletic field at the Henry W. Grady Senior High school for boys.

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, chairman of a committee from the Atlanta board of education, presented the claims of the schools in the grading proposal. Several other petitions for grading on city schools were referred to the committee of the Atlanta board of education, the commissioners taking the position that the $24,500 fund was all that is available for such use at the present time. The $24,500 will be charged to the educational fund which Fulton county gives city schools.

Eighteen thousand dollars will be available to help in Community Chest work on April 1, it was stated.

Several other petitions for street and road improvements were referred to the committee on public works, and reports will be made at the next meeting.

A loan of $100,000 will be made by April 1 to care for deficits and to continue certain improvements now under way, according to a decision of the board.

Several requests for appropriations to assist in entertainment of conventions slated for Atlanta were turned down, the board adhering to the precedent set forth in resolutions adopted the first of the year.

Among requests refused was one asking for assistance in the convention of the Gold Star Mothers' convention. The board also declined to appropriate $500 to aid in grading the site for a swimming pool at the Atlanta Woman's club.

Following resignation Tuesday of the entire personnel of the Georgia state board of barber examiners, Governor Clifford Walker stated Wednesday that he had tendered the three vacant places to three barbers of the state but that he had not yet received their acceptances.

900 'BOYS IN GRAY' TO PARADE HERE

Approximately 900 Confederate veterans are expected to assemble at the state capitol Monday, March 9, at 9:30 o'clock, to participate in a parade to the city auditorium, where a rally will be held to create interest in a campaign which will be waged before the 1925 Georgia legislature for passage of a bill whereby veterans will be paid "back-due" pensions, according to an announcement Wednesday by Dr. C. L. Moore, chairman of the general state committee.

The movement was inaugurated by Dr. Moore, some time ago and recently a number of meetings have been held to formulate plans for the big rally which will assemble veterans from all sections of the state.

Cooperating in the movement with the five Confederate veterans camps of the city and two from Decatur, is the United Daughters of the Confederacy, which has endorsed the movement throughout the state and is aiding in the preparation of exercises here.

The "wearers of the gray" will assemble at the capitol building and form in a parade, thence they will march to the auditorium, accompanied by the Georgia Railway and Power company band. Exercises will begin at 10 o'clock at the auditorium.

Heading the parade will be Brigadier General George W. Wells, of the North Georgia Brigade, with his assistants who will carry the flags of the North Georgia Brigade and the Georgia division.

Luncheon will be served by women of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at the noon hour.

The program will be opened with a prayer by Dr. T. H. Kendall, followed by introductory remarks by Dr. C. L. Moore, general chairman of the state committee.

Governor Clifford Walker will deliver the address of welcome in behalf of the state. Miss Mildred Rutherford, state historian of the U. D. C., will appear in an address based on the history of the Confederacy. Other prominent speakers include Attorney General George M. Napier, Mrs. Frank Harold, president general of the U. D. C., and former Governor Nat E. Harris.

BIG REWARD OFFERED FOR LEADERS OF MOB

Governor Clifford Walker Wednesday offered the maximum reward of $500 for apprehension of the leader of the mob which last Monday burned a negro at the stake near Rocky Ford, in Screven county. The negro was accused of assaulting a white girl 14 years of age. The governor also offered rewards of $100 each for all other members of the lynching mob.

His action is in accordance with the standing offer, made by the governor some months ago, of rewards in this amount for the arrest of any persons guilty of mob outrage in Georgia. At that time the governor stated that he was determined to do all in his power to put a stop to mob violence in this state and on Wednesday stated that the rewards offered for the Screven county mob were following out his announced policy.

Dr. Asbury Jones, pastor of the Duane de Leon Baptist church, of Atlanta, was told of the reward offered by the governor said he "rejoiced that the governor had met so promptly the situation."

Dr. Jones, a lover of the good name of Georgia has read with horror and indignation of the burning of another negro in his beloved state. Dr. Jones said: "To allow this foul offense against civilization to go unpunished will but add to the shame of our people."

As a charter member and at present chairman of the commission on inter-racial cooperation, Dr. Jones has been actively interested for several years in the effort to put an end to lynchings, and called attention to the fact that for the past three years this barbarous practice has rapidly declined. He pointed out that in the whole country there were 58 lynchings in 1922, 28 in 1923, and only 16 last year, and that in Georgia the long-time average of 12 lynchings a year had been cut to four in 1923 and to two last year.

These facts, he said, have been most encouraging to the south and to the whole country, and have been widely and favorably commented upon throughout the nation. Dr. Jones said he hoped that this year Georgia, for the first time in many decades, might have a clean record in this regard.

The occurrence of last Monday, said Dr. Jones, was most depressing. This is the third lynching recorded so far in 1925, the other two having taken place at Greensboro, Miss., a few days ago.

Commenting on early press reports to the effect that members of Monday's mob were unmasked and made no effort to conceal their identity, he pointed out that if it were true apprehension and conviction of the lynchers ought not to be difficult.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of gripe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calomel, the famous little Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than any other style of medicine, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calomels at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea, no griping, no interference with eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calomels are sold out in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommend and guarantee by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—(adv.)

From Outward Appearances Furnaces Look Alike

When the Realtor or builder takes you down cellar to look at the furnace, what assurance have you that the home will be properly heated? All furnaces from the outside look very much alike, but there is a vast difference between the MONCRIEF FURNACE and the NO NAME—their planning—installation—and the local factory service you get with them.

When you see the Moncrief Sign on the furnace pipes, you are assured of a scientifically installed heating plant planned by graduate heating engineers backed by a quarter of a century of manufacturing experience and guaranteed to heat the home under all weather conditions.

Play safe—buy a home heated with a Moncrief Furnace and know that the location of the pipes, the arrangement of the registers and the cold air ducts have been scientifically planned to suit the home and to give the maximum heating efficiency.

THE INAUGURAL.

The inaugural address of President Coolidge Wednesday was his first public expression as the nation's executive under a direct mandate of the people.

Until that moment he had served as president as the legate of an unexpired term that had been voted to another.

And yet his inaugural address was but a reaffirmation of policies that he has vigorously and consistently promulgated since his first address to congress after the death of President Harding. It was a firm, conscientious dedication of his administration to the lighting of the tax burdens at home, and to the promotion of peace through mutual understandings between the nations of the world.

Economy in government and reduction of taxation—greater than heretofore attempted in either—he declared to be the outstanding domestic problems to be met, not only in working out the destiny of our system of government, which is becoming more and more American, but in assuring the era of prosperity to all which, with wisdom in administration and legislation, is ahead for the people of this nation.

He explained why he favored the policy of economy:

"I favor the policy of economy, not because I wish to save money, but because I wish to save people. The men and women of this country who are the ones who bear the cost of government. Every dollar that they carelessly waste means that their life will be so much the more meager. Every dollar that they prudently save means that their life will be so much the more abundant. Unless we wish to hamper the people in their right to earn a living, we must have tax reform."

He declared his opposition to extremely high tax rates because "they produce little or no revenue, because they are bad for the country, and, finally, because they are wrong."

The president with vigor reiterated his advocacy of a world court, and declared that America, having taken a lead in international disarmament, established a policy that she must maintain.

He earnestly favored a continuation of the policy of participation in world conferences.

He promised a continuation of aid to mitigate human suffering and assist in the rehabilitation of distressed nations. He heartily approved the movement to clarify international law and to bring about the outlawing of aggressive war.

One of the most striking notes sounded in his address was that against religious intolerance, and against violations of the constitution and the law in seeking redress for alleged wrong.

If as a candidate for president he had been as outspoken on the subject of religious intolerance as he is as president, he would have lost the Ku Klux vote, most of which regarded his silence as expressive of his approval. He now delivers his former advocates a body blow in denouncing religious intolerance, and his outspoken attitude as president goes far toward condoning his evasion on this subject as a candidate.

In his inaugural he said:

"Those who want their rights respected under the constitution and the law ought to set the example themselves of observing the constitution and the law. We cannot permit any inquisition either within or without the law, or apply any religious test to the holding of office."

President Coolidge's inaugural address will go down in history as a strong and forceful document. It wasted no words, dealt in no generalities, and covered no cesspools in national life with mounds of flowers. It was thoroughly practical, and thoroughly sound. It gave no comfort to the isolationists, met with full sympathy the will of the cooperationists, and pledged government to economic safety.

HURTING GEORGIA.

Governor Walker has very promptly and commendably offered a state reward of $500 for an arrest and conviction in the case of the lynching of a negro near Rocky Ford Monday afternoon. It is hoped the guilty parties may be apprehended and properly punished by law for their crime.

The negro, identified by the victim, was guilty of a heinous crime, punishable in Georgia by death. With the direct evidence he would have been found guilty in any criminal court in Georgia in thirty minutes, and the death penalty would have been imposed by law within 30 days. The majesty of the law would thus have been upheld, and the integrity of our judicial system maintained.

Enforcement of law by constituted authority is government itself. Mob violence is an assault upon government.

The perpetrator of this horrible crime, and every perpetrator of every such crime, should be legally executed. The laws and the courts are for that purpose, and in capital offenses, with direct testimony of guilt, justice does not miscarry.

Only a few months ago, in DeKalb county, a similar crime occurred. Judge Hutchinson called an immediate session of the superior court. The criminal was convicted and sentenced in one hearing, and in 30 days he had expired his crime. The same punishment as that administered by a mob was meted in legal and orderly process. The same would have been true in the Rocky Ford case.

Today all over America millions of people are reading of another "burning at the stake in Georgia," and of the supremacy of the mob, and of the defiance of law and authority. What a shameful piece of advertising it is!

Some years ago a negro was burned at the stake in Georgia. It created a national scandal, culminating in a sensational fight in congress for discriminatory legislation against Georgia and the south. Not one person in America, of any race, condoned the crime, but public thought vigorously condemned the mob that struck down the court, and assaulted the functions of orderly government.

Georgia has been making real progress in the past two or three years in putting down mob violence. Lynchings have been materially reduced, and the law-abiding citizens of Georgia—the overwhelming majority—had hoped that another such stain upon Georgia's name would not occur.

This is the first lynching in Georgia in 1925. Let it be the last. Government can only endure by strict adherence to the orderly processes of law. The mob is a strike at government. It is anarchy. It is cowardly, and those who thus defy law, in "regulating" in lieu of constituted authority, are guilty of major felonies, and should be punished accordingly.

PUR THE BUREAU BACK!

Some weeks ago, when the traffic bureau was discontinued by council, The Constitution expressed serious fear that it would result in increased accidents.

Internal politics in the police department existed, it is alleged, and the discontinuance of this branch of the service followed.

Since that time traffic accidents have alarmingly increased.

Shall human lives and limbs be sacrificed to the expediences and caprices of political factionalism? It is unthinkable.

The Atlanta Safety Council was responsible for the traffic bureau. It urged the elimination of friction and politics, if any, and the continuance of the bureau. Council cut it out.

There is now a demand for its reestablishment. Council can do no better than to reestablish it along strong, constructive, harmonious lines.

DAWES IS RIGHT!

Vice President Dawes may have provoked a laugh by his impulsive barrage, in his inaugural address, at the senate rules that make one-man filibusters possible, and that make constructive legislative work secondary to "senatorial privilege." He may have thrown some of his senatorial colleagues-to-be into a mild rage, inwardly at least, by his audacity. He may have thrown down a challenge from the comparatively obscure and functionless office of vice president, to the one group in America's public life that is a law unto itself, and the punctilious master of all the ethics of officialdom.

But he was right. And if he will carry on the fight and win—"Hell and Maria!" to the contrary notwithstanding—he will not die in obscurity as most vice presidents do, whose chiefs do not die in office.

Words Across the Footlights

BY ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON.

Former Ambassador and Man of Letters.

(The American Academy of Arts and Letters has just awarded its gold medal for good diction on the stage to Walter Hampden, impersonator of Othello, Hamlet, Cyrano de Bergerac and other characters.)

"What is diction?" is a question that doubtless has been asked by many persons since the American Academy of Arts and Letters established its gold medal for good diction on the stage.

That the question should be asked by every actor and actress of the American theater was the challenging intent of the academy in founding the prize. Nothing except the church interests the public more than the theater.

It will be strange if the academy's precipitation of the topic into general discussion shall not result in a revival of the best elocutionary traditions of the theater. This is certainly its ambition. The word elocution is in bad repute in America. It suggests to many the forced, self-conscious, high-pitched, full-lunged argumentative method which is so often found on the platform and in the pulpit, and which on the stage wears a passion to tatters. Diction is not all of elocution, but it is the largest part—the actual speaking, independent of the interpretation of the words. Manifestly, one might have good diction as Othello and yet give a false sense to every passage; on the contrary he might know the inner meaning of every thought in the text and not be able to convey it to the tenth row of the orchestra. It is because this is a cardinal fault of the theater, and because diction can be taught, that it seems worth while, in the public interest, to lay stress upon its cultivation.

Who has not felt after some play, upon the scenery and costumes of which a fortune may have been lavished, a sense of injury in being deprived of the text by faulty diction? Sometimes it comes from that curse of all art, a wrong conception of realism. Because in real life persons are impetuous, lines must perforce be given without phrasing, because persons in drawing rooms speak in low conversational tones, the audience is made to feel as if it were an unsuccessful intruder upon confidential matters. No one ever failed to get any syllable spoken by Salvini or Sarah Bernhardt. Each had the equipment of a natural voice of beauty and penetration; but many an actor without either quality has won his way by mastery of the voice he had, and by the determination to be heard, not through noisy expostulations, but through intelligent control.

BITS OF OCEAN LIFE

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

On the Atlantic—Off the coast of Ireland today we ran into another "bit of wind, sir." Yet our nearness to land gave us courage. We will touch Plymouth, the first port of call, in the morning. Then on to Cherbourg, where we disembark.

Palmers are beginning to tick. The ship has come to the point of departure for a couple crossing the Atlantic amount to about five pounds, or $25. This is exclusive of the gouge for the seamen's fund. It seems to me that the most remunerative work on a liner is in the kitchen. I understand the most remunerative work on a liner is in the kitchen. I understand the most remunerative work on a liner is in the kitchen.

The salary of a liner captain is about $5,000 a year. Nearly half of this goes to the British government as a tax on the ship. The captain in case of disaster must click his heels and go down with his ship.

I have never seen an auction pool on a ship that didn't have a pool for the auctioneer. It seems to be a job for the professional smart alec—one of those unlearned, underbred persons who are so well known to the public.

This one was no exception, indeed a little worse than most. He was a loud-mouthed vulgarian and I was glad to see an American banker and a titled Englishman leave the lounge in disgust. As a matter of fact, I see no good reason for the auction pool. It panders to the lowest taste.

Despite rough seas and a difficult voyage, my only catastrophe is of a somewhat impersonal nature. The night before leaving New York my portable typewriter gave a few gasps and expired. I was leaving before people are inclined to light reading on liners. Among the books noted on the promenade deck were "Rugged Waters" (And why that?) "The Grand Fleet" by Lord Jellicoe, "Flaming Youth," "Mr. and Mrs. Haddock Abroad," "R. F. D. No. 3," and acres of crossword puzzle books. "White Light Nights," by a certain author, is a most interesting book. The result of the voyage, which was unanimously approved by the membership of the federation, is as follows:

"Whereas, the practice of carrying pistols, except by officers of the law, is a menace to the dignity, morals and peace of our nation. Therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the Atlanta Federation of Women, do hereby record our hearty indorsement of the efforts of the Atlanta Constitution to stop this evil and urge the passage of such legislation as is necessary to restrict the sale of pistols."

The resolution was offered by the resolutions committee of the federation, of which Mrs. T. T. Stevens is president.

AGED MAN DRAWS LONG GANG TERM ON PROHIBITION CHARGE

H. A. Echols, 64 years of age, was sentenced to serve from 1 to 4 years on the chain for violating prohibition laws.

Echols was arrested about two years ago by county policemen when he was found making liquor in the back of his home. At the time of his arrest, his two sons, Edward, 18, and Louis, 16, were with him but were released when Echols stated that he "made the boys work with him."

Clarence Hart was given a sentence of 10 months on the Fulton county jail following his conviction of violating the dry laws.

Riley Ferguson, of Stone Mountain, who was arrested in September, 1921, for transporting liquor and who automobile and 18 gallons of liquor were confiscated, pleaded guilty Wednesday and was sentenced to serve 10 months on the chain.

Although slight improvement was shown Wednesday in the condition of Judge Colquitt Carter, United States commissioner, who was stricken in his office Tuesday afternoon with an attack of acute indigestion, he is not yet out of danger, according to reports of his physicians received at the federal building Wednesday.

In the absence of Judge Carter and United States Commissioner Joe Abbott of Marietta, who is also seriously ill, cases in the commissioner's office are being handled by Judge J. J. Brown, United States commissioner, whose headquarters are in Newnan. Judge Brown disposed of several minor cases during the day.

$50,000 DAMAGES ASKED FOR INJURY

L. G. Lane, former fireman on a switch engine of the Southern Railway, Wednesday filed suit against the road for $50,000 damages which he avers he suffered while discharging his duties as a fireman January 18. Lane claims his side was punctured by a shakelaw when he tried to loosen gears of the engine, which became stuck.

The suit was filed by Attorneys Hill & Adams. Lane says he had been employed by the road for about eight years prior to the accident, which he alleges was a result of negligence on the part of employees.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

BREAD AND ACIDITY.

People who about diet fads recommended in "health" magazines of the shoddy class are especially fond of vegetarianism and when they carry this to the logical extreme of rejecting even eggs, many of them develop what they call "acid dyspepsia," hyperchlorhydria, too much muriatic acid in the gastric juice. The direct cause of this, very often, is overeating, particularly an excessive proportion of bread in one form or another. White bread or bread of any other kind, and if all this carbohydrate is unwise supplemented with cereals in the form of "breakfast food" and potatoes as a mainstay, why, an acid stomach is to be expected. If the regular human taboo is broken and meat added to the diet, the fact remains that hyperacidity of the stomach is likely to result from a diet in which bread and meat are the staples. Certain items which are sometimes looked upon rather as luxuries or at least as nonessentials are necessary to supplement bread and meat, namely: green vegetables, especially leafy vegetables, and fresh fruit. These are not luxuries; it is good economy, because it brings good health, to have a liberal variety of fresh vegetables and fresh fruits as the season and market will afford at all times.

There is a growing custom among bakers to furnish an improved bread, namely, one containing a minimum of mineral salts and the lack of essential vitamins in the modern loaf has led to a frank acknowledgment on the part of many bakers that there is a need for a "vitaminized" loaf. The forward looking bakers are putting out a loaf in which is incorporated a small amount of milk. In addition to this, some bakers are using a fine complement to the dairy people, who are heart and soul behind the milk for health propaganda. They maintain that the new milk bread contains the necessary fat soluble vitamin, which enables the young to utilize calcium for the building of bone and teeth. That may be true, though even the ordinary white bread, when eaten spread with butter, yields plenty of fat soluble vitamin. The addition of a small amount of milk to white bread is an improvement, but the improved bread needs still more improvement if it is to compare with bread made from unbleached flour.

Unbleached flour (the kind Sylvester Graham used many years ago, not the so-called "white" flour of today) does not keep as well as white flour. The poor keeping qualities explain in part why real Graham unbleached flour is not popular today. The big millers or the retail dealers today, the baking people declare that the new milk bread keeps better than ordinary bread, and takes a better color in baking. All of these features are devoted to be wished, I'll tell the world and the average baker, but even if we accept the claims of the bakers, the bread, the latest improved loaf is just a compliment paid by the baking industry to the dairy industry and a frank acknowledgment that there is something about milk which makes the deficiencies of the staff of life. If food faddists and self-appointed contributors to the vox populi columns of the "health" magazines, and recognized scientific experts on nutrition have provided the words and music.

Another big Atlanta organization Wednesday joined in The Constitution war against pistol-toting when the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs passed resolutions condemning the practice of pistol-toting and commending The Constitution for its efforts to abolish this evil.

The resolution, which was unanimously approved by the membership of the federation, is as follows:

"Whereas, the practice of carrying pistols, except by officers of the law, is a menace to the dignity, morals and peace of our nation. Therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the Atlanta Federation of Women, do hereby record our hearty indorsement of the efforts of the Atlanta Constitution to stop this evil and urge the passage of such legislation as is necessary to restrict the sale of pistols."

The resolution was offered by the resolutions committee of the federation, of which Mrs. T. T. Stevens is president.

Where is the largest clock in the world?

The one erected by Colgate & Co. at Jersey City. The diameter of the face is 50 feet and the dial is visible far out in New York harbor. The designer of the clock was Arthur F. Eddy.

Do you know of anything that could be safely used in removing rust and scale from pipes?

There is no safe and effective means removing this chemically. Any chemical that would do the work would injure the pipe if proper care was not used and would be injurious to health if it got on the skin. Mechanical removal is the safest

Oratorical Contest Chief Writes on Famous Speakers Found in English History

Randolph Leigh Calls Burke Greatest of British Orators in Third Article.

Randolph Leigh, national director of the oratorical contest for high school boys and girls, which is sponsored in Georgia by The Constitution and the state high school association, and nationally by the American Bar association, has written a series of articles on the history and art of oratory which are extremely interesting and valuable to students of the speakers' art. The third of these articles is published herewith.

BY RANDOLPH LEIGH, Director, National High School Oratorical Contest.

The greatest of English orators was an Irishman. It is unfortunate that parts of Burke's speech on the French revolution have been reprinted so often as to become almost commonplace. Nevertheless it is still delightful and profitable to revert to him. Note the lightness and grace, coupled with depth of thought, in the following:

"It is now 16 or 17 years since I saw the queen of France, then the dauphiness, at Versailles, and surely never lighted on this orb, which she hardly seemed to touch, a more delightful vision. . . .

"But the age of chivalry is gone; that of sensibilities, economists and calculators has succeeded, and the glory of Europe is extinguished forever. Never, never shall we behold that generous loyalty to rank and sex, that proud submission, that dignified obedience, that subordination of the heart, which kept alive, in servitude itself, the spirit of an exalted freedom."

"The ungratified grace of life, the cheap defense of nations, the nurse of many a sentiment and heroic enterprise is gone. It is gone, that sensibility of principle which felt a strain like a wound, which inspired courage while it mitigated ferocity, which ennobled whatever it touched, and under which vice itself lost half its evil by losing all its grossness."

Pitt, the elder, was of the hammer and tongs type. This is from the Willkes case:

"There is one plain maxim to which I have adhered through life: that in every question in which my liberty and my property were concerned I should consult and be determined by the dictates of common sense. I confess that I am prone to distrust the refinement of learning, because I have seen the ablest and most learned men equally liable to deceive themselves and to mislead others. The condition of human nature would be amenable to deed, if nothing less than the greatest learning and talents, which fall to the lot of so small number of men, were to suffice to direct our judgment. . . . Unlimited power is not to corrupt the minds of those who possess it; and this I know, that where law ends, tyranny begins."

Lord Chesterfield, in addition to writing gentlemanly precepts for a son who remained a boor to the last, went in for statofact. This is what the man whose name is usually associated with good living, said against the sin act:

"This bill, therefore, appears to be designed only to thrust the ranks of mankind, and to disburden the world of the multitudes that inhabit it; and is perhaps the strongest proof of political sagacity that our ministers have yet exhibited."

"They well know that they are universally detested and that whenever a Briton is desired they are freed from an enemy. They have therefore opened the floodgate of sin upon the nation, that, when it is less numerous, it will be more easily governed."

CLAIM MISSOURI MEN USED SERUM TO GET INSURANCE

Poplar Bluff, Mo., March 4.—Use of a serum to produce a temporary swelling of the arms and legs to substantiate injury claims against insurance companies and in damage suits against the Missouri Pacific railroad and the city of Doniphan, Mo., was alleged today by postal inspectors who arrested E. G. Garmann, of Doniphan, on charges of using the mails to defraud.

Men claiming to have been injured in accidents reported to physicians and showed badly swollen legs and arms. After several days, the swelling disappeared and no serious results were noticed. Officers said it had been impossible to ascertain the contents of the serum.

Garmann was arrested on a warrant provided by U. S. Attorney Cole, of Little Rock, Ark., on complaints of a Little Rock insurance concern. He was brought here last night and held under $10,000 bond.

PLANES AT AUGUSTA ON RETURN FLIGHT

Augusta, Ga., March 4.—Eleven of the group of 12 army pursuit airplanes, in command of Major Thomas G. Lanphier, flying from Miami to Langley Field, Va., reached Augusta this afternoon at 5 o'clock. They left Miami at 11:58. They will spend the night here and continue the flight tomorrow.

One of the squadron of 12 army airplanes flying from Miami, Fla., to Selfridge Field, Mich., was forced down at Daytona Beach on account of engine trouble, according to Lieutenant Clyde Rich, the pilot, who landed on the seaward on the Ormond-Daytona beach early tonight.

Rich announced that his plane was in good working order, and that he would proceed early tomorrow morning to Augusta, to join the other planes.

PREDICTS ANOTHER DAWN-TO-DUSK FLIGHT

Miami, Fla., March 4.—Another attempt to make a dawn-to-dusk flight from Selfridge Field, Michigan, to Miami will be made by the first pursuit group of army airplanes and the time between Detroit and Miami will not be more than 12 hours. Major Thomas G. Lanphier, commander of the group, declared as he stepped into his plane just before the squadron of 12 took flight for Augusta, Ga., at 11:58 a. m. today.

"We shall make the flight and it will take less than nine hours' actual flying time," Major Lanphier told Gar Wood, sportsman, who was at the field to say goodbye.

Major Lanphier also said that the "600 aviators in the army service are for the most part in sympathy with the stand taken by Brigadier General William Mitchell."

Dr. Fox Leaves Macon To Study Japanese Beetle

Macon, Ga., March 4.—(Special.)—Dr. Henry Fox, deposited biology professor of Mercer university, announced today that he will leave Macon Friday to take up scientific investigation work in the United States Bureau of Entomology, laboratory at Riverport, N. J., on the Japanese beetle.

Dr. Fox has been connected with the Japanese beetle investigation before and since coming to Mercer. He will leave his family, a wife and daughter, in Macon until the summer, he said. The daughter is a student at Western college.

The departure of Dr. Fox from the Mercer campus will mark the close of one of the most noted contacts between religious and scientific elements in education in the south. The board of trustees of the university opposed his holding a position on the faculty because of his religious beliefs, which conflicted with those of the Baptist denomination, which owns Mercer.

Revision of Compulsory Education Law Is Sought

Declaring that the present compulsory education law in Georgia is inadequate for the needs of the state and that its revision would not only be of decided advantage in the field of education, but would serve to alleviate the child labor problem, the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs Wednesday adopted a resolution endorsing revision of the law.

The resolution came before the federation sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's club.

"Unanimous approval greeted the resolution, which reads as follows: 'Whereas, The educators of Georgia recommend a revision of the compulsory education law, and 'Whereas, According to records, there are more than 700 children in this community alone who are behind in their classes because they were not compelled to enter school before the age of eight years, and

TREASURY WILL OFFER LONG-TERM BOND ISSUE

Washington, March 4.—The treasury again has turned to a long term bond issue to tide it over the next three months and to aid in spreading out short-time maturities.

Announcement was made tonight that an additional issue of 20 to 30-year 4 per cent bonds, together with an offering of nine months' treasury certificates of indebtedness, bearing 3 per cent interest, would constitute the March 15 quarterly fiscal operation.

The long term securities are the same as those sold last December 15 and will bear interest to December 15, the last tax-paying date of the current calendar year. Additional financing will be necessary then.

On the basis of present calculations, the treasury will accept about $450,000,000 in subscriptions to the two offerings. It had not been determined tonight, however, how many of each issue will be sold. It has about $250,000,000 in certificates of indebtedness maturing March 15. These must be met, as well as a total of about $300,000,000 in interest on the public debt which must be paid during March, April and May.

March 15, being a tax-paying date, is counted on to bring in enough money, with the proceeds from the

"Dulcy."

(At the Lyric.)

When a young wife who doesn't know anything at all about business affairs but is full of determination to help her husband succeed begins to meddle, a lot of trouble and a lot of fun can result. The fun and the trouble are both shown in "Dulcy," one of the most successful comedies on the American stage, which is being presented at the Lyric theatre this week.

Leading woman of the Lyric players, invites a number of important people on a house party where the husband, played by Helen Joy, and a big business deal. But "Dulcy" has a genius for doing the wrong thing and by the time the party is well started everybody is at daggers points.

Loew's Vaudeville.

(At Loew's Grand.)

When the dignity was being passed around Sam Lewis and Sam Dody were out chasing butterflies and they frolic around Loew's Grand stage this week with a hurricane of high spirits and good humor that sends all the doom swirling out into the darkness. They have a single purpose in life, to make folks happy, and Loew's Grand patrons who have seen them are agreed that they are succeeding this week. Uncle Dave Macon with his son, Fiddlin' Sid, are getting a share of applause with a novel program of songs fresh from the north Georgia mountains. The Paramount quintet is another of the six great vaudeville features that share honors

50.5 Per Cent of Petroleum Produced in World in 1924 Came From United States

Paris, March 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—France must have the cooperation of the great Anglo-Saxon powers in work of restoration of Europe and to preserve her credit she must pay her debts, declared former Premier Caillaux, speaking at a luncheon of the Anglo-American Press association today.

He quoted Baron Louis, the former financier under Napoleon I, as saying: "A state which wishes to have credit must pay its debts, even those contracted unconsciously," adding that this was his doctrine.

"An incorrect action toward England and the United States would be repugnant to all Frenchmen," he added, "and would be to pass the sponge over the state on all that can be wiped out to make such compensations as would not obligate any country to impoverish itself. One must not reap pecuniary advantage from a country, for this counts for little when moral advantages are considered. In countries like yours live in the future, but we live in the present."

"What everyone is asking today is the maintenance of a great civilization, and for this France needs them. Do not let us allow money questions to occupy too prominent a place."

Caillaux appealed to the newspapermen present to help in the establishment of a new order of things. "I believe it was I," he added, "who first said: 'It is not a just to ask us to pay for the uniforms in which our soldiers were killed—perhaps with a rather acid pen.'"

Asked after his speech if he favored entering now into debt negotiations with America, he replied: "We must talk, but this is a good time to do so."

"Some speeches have been made on both sides," he remarked laughingly. "I think debt talks should take place in a congenial atmosphere."

At the beginning of his speech, he referred to the "ordeals" he had undergone, saying the English and American press had "not always been well informed on this subject."

AVERA STOPS GRANTHAM IN 7TH ROUND AT FORT

Jewish Progressive-Atlanta 'Y' Game Postponed

Game Put Off on Account Death of Star's Relative; May Be Played Monday

The grand finale and climax of one of Atlanta's greatest basketball seasons, which was scheduled for last night at the auditorium between the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. and the Jewish Progressive club, was postponed tentatively until Monday night at 8:30 o'clock on the Georgia Tech court. The postponement of the game came as result of the death of Mrs. Rebecca Stern, grandmother of Captain Dave Spellberger of the Jewish Progressive club. She died about noon Wednesday and the players on the Jewish Progressive club decided not to play the game last night under the circumstances.

Hundreds of eager basketball fans who have waited two years to see such a great basketball game braved the rain and cold last night long enough to journey down to the auditorium court where the disappointment came that there would be no game until next Monday night. It was a great crowd that was anxious to see the game but when the news came that the game had been postponed because of the death of spellberger's grandmother, the fans went back home after expressing a word of sympathy.

Now that the game has been definitely set for next Monday night on the Georgia Tech court, the basketball fans who have been in regular attendance at the tournament games just finished on the auditorium court will have a chance to rest up a bit before seeing Atlanta's climax next Monday night.

JACKSON TAKES WAYCROSS REINS

Waycross, Ga., March 4.—(Special.)—Manager Joe Jackson, of the Waycross baseball club, arrived in Waycross today and immediately reported to local officials. He stated that he had already signed several likely-looking candidates for the team and was on the trail of a number of other experienced players.

Several members of last year's club are already in the city, anxious to again win berths on the local organization.

With the arrival of Manager Jackson, things are expected soon to begin to hum in baseball circles, and prospects are bright for another winning team for Waycross this year.

PRAYERAIDED CAROLINA QUINTET

Chapel Hill, N. C., March 4.—Prayer has been the biggest factor in the three southern conference basketball tournaments won by the University of North Carolina in the last four years, as well as the five successive South Atlantic titles, Coach "Monk" McDonald, who prior to being made coach was for four years a member of the team, said today.

RAIN CHECKS GEORGIA PRACTICE

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., March 4.—(Special.) Rain interfered with baseball practice here Wednesday afternoon, just when the squad seemed to be ready to settle down to its difficult work.

Practice swung into its second week here Monday, when infield and outfield candidates reported to Coach White. The battery men reported a week earlier.

A light batting practice was held Tuesday and Coach White will begin work in full blast with warm weather again. Andy Chambers and Bill Munday are the only veteran twirlers from last season. Tully, Tom Nelson, Snaky Kain, Kinson Finley and Algonzo Hatcher round out the pitching aspirants.

"Skip" Johnson, James Morton, Tom Flanigan, Andrew Kingery, and Kirkland are seeking the receiving position. None of these are lettermen, however.

Captain-elect J. D. Thomason, Harry Middlebrooks, and Nolan Richardson, are infielders from last season, while Scrapy Moore is the only outfielder from last year back. Richardson has not reported to practice as yet, having been on the basketball team. Other candidates include: Holt Ruffin, Sol Sator, Howell Holis, Goffrey, Billy Aremowitch, Bob Richardson, and Taylor. This, however, is not a full list of the roster.

Georgia's schedule begins on March 22, when they play Ohio State at a brace of games here. On the 24th and 25th of this month, Furman is played, and the Bulldogs dedicate the Gowdy field at Fort Benning on March 27 and 28. On the 30th and 31st Clemson comes here for two games.

NURMI SETS ANOTHER MARK

New York, March 4.—Paavo Nurmi ran to a world's record for one and one-eighth miles in four minutes, 55.45 seconds at the 106th infantry games in Brooklyn tonight.

The former record, four minutes 58 seconds, was made by Nurmi at the Brooklyn college competition, January 24. In his race tonight he defeated Willie Goodwin, of the New York A. C., by a third of a lap.

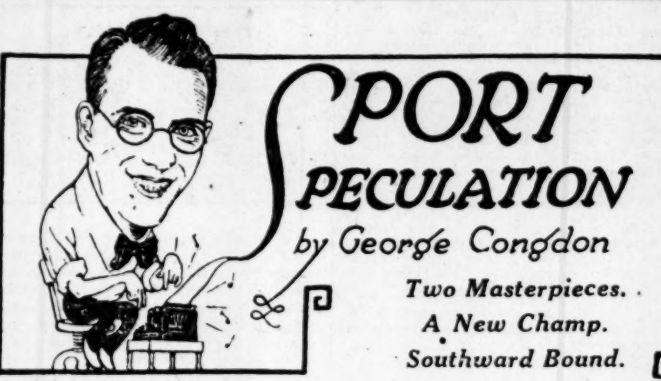

Andy Crow, of New York, was half a lap behind and Ilmar Prim, of the Finnish-American A. C., was disqualified.

The flying Finn failed to lower his figures for 2,000 yards, running six seconds slower than he did at Buffalo on February 12. It was Nurmi's last appearance in the United States before participating in two Canadian track meets at Hamilton and Toronto. He left for Canada immediately after the race.

SAMMY ENTERS N. Y. TOURNAMENT

New York, March 4.—Sammy Mandell, Rockford (Ill.) lightweight, who has heretofore been a holdout in the New York state athletic commission's lightweight tournament, today joined the ranks of boxers seeking the 135-pound crown left without an owner, when Benny Leonard retired from the ring. Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, notified the commission today that Mandell would accept the nomination and compete in the tournament.

Mandell, who recently scored a point verdict over Sid Terris, crack Brooklyn lightweight, is regarded as the leading lightweight in the quest for Leonard's crown and the commission particularly desired his name to be included among those competing for the title. He got a bye in the first-round draw by virtue of his victory over Terris. Later he was given a second bye which Kane accepted today in announcing Mandell's entry into the tournament. He will compete in the round before the semifinal against an opponent to be selected by the commission next week.

BASKETBALL'S over for Atlanta. There'll be the J. P. C.-Central Y game probably Monday night on the Tech court, but the Conference tournament ended the big works. This isn't written to discourage the people who are pondering the matter of seeing the J. P. C.-Y game. Anyone who has seen either team in action wouldn't be swayed. He'd go anyway, and be treated to a real basketball game. But the big works of the basketball season here were shot off with the final game of the tournament.

Basketball games are alike largely. All, but two, were alike in the tournament. These two were different from the others as day is from night. These games were the Georgia-Kentucky game and the championship encounter between Tulane and North Carolina. Both were classics of the court that will live long in the memory of this chronicler.

EVERY game the champion Tar Heels played helped to crystallize our idea of the secret of their success. It sounds easy just this way: they held their teamwork intact in spite of everything and when they couldn't get in close with it, they didn't shoot. They concentrated on teamwork. Sure it sounds easy, but it isn't easy to pass on fairly good chances to shoot when the score is about tied to wait for THE chance.

We set this down on paper in spite of the fact that the lead the Tar Heels ran up at the end of the game was due largely to long shots by McDonald. Until that time, long shots were not tried. There had been 35 minutes of play in which North Carolina teamwork was held intact, without the long shots. The Tar Heels knew they could stay even, and generally a bit ahead, by teamwork. Only then did McDonald start shooting long ones. When the first one sank, he had his range. The other three were easy. This may sound foolish, but we'll continue to argue that the confidence born of 35 minutes of successful play with teamwork was responsible for the success of the long shots that put Tulane definitely out of the game.

WILLIE HOPPE has been king of the 18.2 balkline artists for a long time. One of our earliest recollections after the stage in which a young man in a small town spends half his time lying on a pool table is that of hearing of the prowess of Willie Hoppe. Unless Willie does some tall recovering, and that quickly, the coming generation will hear considerably more of Jake Schaefer when the pool table stage aforementioned is reached.

Jake Schaefer accomplished a feat of skill, strength and nerve the other night in his first outstanding match of the year. He stood there and ran 400 from scratch. Think it over. What a strain on the man's nerves, what a tribute to his skill and what proof of his physical strength to stand up under the nerve strain of that evening! It was more than Hoppe had ever done.

THE baseball clans are gathering, the powers be praised. Sight of Bert Niehoff the other day in company of Red Smith recalled the hot days of last summer when the Crackers and the Chicks were nose and nose. Then Dick Burrus, the first sacker who was drafted by the Braves, blew into town last night to see his Tar Heel boys win the basketball championship of the southern conference.

They're starting southward now from all parts of the country. Three of the Crackers will go to Winter Park from the Pacific coast. Niehoff and Smith have already left and 'a' crew left last night for St. Petersburg where the Braves are getting ready for the season. Also last night we lost our amiable friend and co-worker, Julian Griffin, who departed for the Crackers' camp. No we're not missing the trip altogether. We think we'll get Julian back in a few days to go on ourself and back in the Florida sunshine watching Bert Niehoff's help, but until then you'll do well to watch Judy's stuff.

N. E. GEORGIA GENE CALDERA TOURNEY OPENS SIGNS WITH MEMPHIS

Athens, Ga., March 4.—(Special.)—Northeast Georgia's fourth annual high school basketball tournament began here Wednesday, with 19 games played on the opening day. Woodruff hall, new indoor sports building at the university, is the scene of all games, and two games were going on at all times Wednesday.

Twenty games were originally scheduled for Wednesday, but Lavinia was unable to get here, and defaulted its game to Colbert.

Of the games played Wednesday, the Athens-Hartwell, Canton-Washington and the Snellville-Commerce were the closest affairs. Athens won by one point, as did Snellville, while Canton defeated Washington 25 to 27, after two extra five-minute periods.

Outstanding teams on the tourney, after the first day's play, seem to be Athens, Winder, Carnesville and Grayson. The last three teams easily defeated their opponents and showed the best form of any quintet with the exception of the local five.

Nine Games Today. The tourney ending Saturday night. Trophies will be awarded and much interest centers on the affair which is expected to draw large crowds from the surrounding towns.

The champions will meet Statham high Thursday in second round and should come through with an easy victory, which will guarantee their traveling as far as the third round anyway.

The tournament is being run off in splendid style by the joint chairmen of the Y. M. C. A. and Athens Banner-Herald committees, which are sponsoring the meet. These men, C. W. Jones, of the "Y," and Bryant Lumpkin, of The Banner-Herald, deserve much credit for the splendid and smooth manner in which the games were run off Wednesday.

The games Wednesday attracted fine crowds, the city being literally crowded with visitors. Larger gatherings are being expected as the play progresses.

The officiating is being attended to by Larry Conover, former Penn State all-American football star and later football coach at Georgia, and Dub Thornton, local Y. M. C. A. luminary.

Wednesday's Results. Cumulative, 21; Covington, 12; Chamblee, 25; Winder, 17; Carnesville, 41; Pendergrass, 4; Chatsworth, 18; Monroe, 13; Lawrenceville, 22; Salem, 13; Cornelia, 22; Loganville, 10; Comer, 21; Eatonton, 13; Arnoldsville, 20; Nubers, 10; Winder, 37; Greensboro, 26; Toccoa, 11; Dalton, 13; Colbert (by default); Macon, 42; Woodville, 7; Brashton, 25; Rockledge, 13; Canton, 27; Washington, 28; Snellville, 21; Marietta, 13; Marietta, 27; Danville, 13; Athens, 14; Hartwell, 13; Richman, 21; Mansfield, 16; Mayfield, 26; Jefferson, 8; Grayson, 24; Zula, 10.

Benning Boy's Seconds Toss Towel as Soldier Goes Down On Sharp Uppercut to Jaw

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

After staying for nearly six rounds, swapping punch for punch, Tanks Grantham, an ambitious young soldier from Fort Benning, Ga., last night at Fort McPherson turned meat for Larry Avera, junior welterweight champion of the south, in the seventh when he went down on a sharp left uppercut to the jaw and couldn't get up before seconds tossed in the towel.

Avera's technical knockout of Grantham, who has whipped all the soldiers at 142 pounds in the Fourth Corps area, closed the fort's second fight show. It was an improvement over the first and brought Brigadier General A. J. Bowley, commander of the Fourth Corps area, to Atlanta to give fort boxing a push.

During the show last night Major H. J. Keeley, president of the Twenty-Second Infantry Athletic association, declared that he will present another show in a short time, again featuring soldiers in the preliminaries and one soldier in the main go. The only other bout in which a civilian was engaged last night was the semi-windup in which the Walloping Wop of Benning defeated the name of Sailor Vinson from the line of promising pugilists by stopping him in the second round.

Martin and Joyce Judges. The card last night attracted some 200 people from Atlanta besides nearly all the soldiers that could be packed in the fort theater. Robert Martin and Lieutenant T. F. Joyce acted as judges. Bill Kaliska refereed the bouts, and Trammell Scott, member of the Atlanta Boxing commission, was timekeeper.

Before the show started General Bowley was introduced and told the soldiers that he would do all he could to push their boxing cards here as long as they were kept on a clean, sportsmanlike basis. General Bowley was strong in his praise of boxing as a means of physical building.

The finish of the main bout came like a bolt, although the Benning soldier just before the end of the sixth round made a motion to his second that looked like a holier for the sponge or the towel or anything to stop the punishment he was taking. The seconds apparently failed to hear or didn't have time before the round ended to sling the necessary implements.

Avera Shoots Left. Grantham came out in the seventh round looking as husky and dangerous as in the first. The start of the fight, Avera opened on him again, with his right. Grantham made one feeble effort though, and that was all. He was reeling like a drunken man when Avera shot his left gun from the floor and caught the Benning boy on the point of the chin. That was all. Before Avera could follow up with a fifth, with Grantham still motionless, the white towel fluttered into the ring. The fight marked the first time that Grantham has been stopped. He recently kayoed Boots Antley, of Columbus.

Until the last 30 seconds of the sixth round Grantham stood up and worried Avera considerably more than did K. O. Moore, the McPherson soldier who has taken two lickings at the hands of Avera. In fact, Grantham had things about even, after losing the first couple of periods by a shade. Grantham weighed 140 pounds, while Avera scaled 143 pounds, a little over weight.

Left jabs and left hooks, quick as lightning, gave Avera the edge in the opening rounds, although Grantham was landing a few of his own left and right hooks.

Grantha seemed to get stronger in the third, while Avera weakened a trifle, and things were about even when the chimes were tapped. The fourth saw Grantham show a little, but he kept things even again, slanting some punishing right hooks to Avera's jaw. The fifth found both boys fighting harder, but Avera began to show class in this session and took an edge, although taking some bad slams from the soldier.

Avera Opens in Sixth. Even in the sixth Grantham looked good until Avera began a terrific drive that carried the Benning boy into the ropes twice. Suddenly, Avera opened with both guns at Grantham's midriff and slammed him so hard that he was in the finishing tap at Grantham's jaw. Grantham made his frantic motion to his seconds then, but the bout was over before anything more was done.

In the seventh Grantham seemed to have recovered considerably, but Avera opened again with both mitts, landed two left hooks to the jaw, one right cross to the jaw and then slipped in the finishing uppercut.

Sailor Vinson was no exception for the wild slamming of the Walloping Wop, who weighed in at 150 pounds, 10 pounds more than when he went out to ribbons by Avera a little less than a year ago in a decision over the same ropes.

The Wop carried Vinson off his feet, although the Sailor drove the Wop into the ropes once in the first. The finishing poke, the left uppercut to the jaw, carried Vinson down to stay two minutes after the second round started.

In the preliminaries Kid Escue, of Company E, won a decision over R. A. Peterson, of Company K; John L. Brennan, of Company G, fought a draw with Jim Brennan, of Company F; and a local head-quarters company, polished off Coker, of the service company, in the first round of their scheduled four-round event.

INDIAN SQUAD FISHER WILL IN GOOD SHAPE AGAIN COACH AT HARVARD

Cambridge, Mass., March 4.—Robert "Bob" Fisher, since 1919 head coach of Harvard's football team, tonight was reappointed to serve during the season of 1925. Coach Fisher reconsidered a recently announced determination to retire, the Harvard Athletic committee stated, in making the announcement.

On Fisher's recommendation, it was announced, Mayor Charles D. Daly, U. S. A., former West Point football coach, who will be assigned to take charge of the Harvard unit of the officers' reserve corps, probably in June, and Leo H. Leary, head coach of Harvard football in 1916, will be named as assistants.

Former Giant Captain Dies. Augusta, Ga., March 4.—John M. Ward, one-time captain of the New York Giants, died at a hospital here this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock. He celebrated his 65th birthday yesterday. The veteran ball player was spending the winter season in Augusta.

Death resulted from an attack of pneumonia which he contracted while on a hunting trip early last week.

He was carried to the hospital Saturday and Mrs. Ward, who was at Pinehurst, N. C., rushed to his bedside. There had never been any noticeable improvement in his condition. The funeral is expected to be conducted in Babylon, Long Island, N. Y., where he made his home. The body will be sent there for burial, leaving Augusta tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock.

He had been a winter visitor to Augusta for a number of years. He was an ardent lover of golf and after giving up baseball devoted considerable time to the game. He was at one time considered among the leading amateur golfers of the United States.

He was engaged in the practice of law and had offices at 36 West Forty-fourth street, New York city.

New Junior High School Building Action Delayed

Although definite action on a new building for the Hoke Smith Junior High school was postponed by the board of education Wednesday, assurance was given that the structure will be built this year and probably in time for the opening of the new school year in September.

Three plans have been proposed by which the present housing situation might be remedied by construction of a new building, and city officials, including Mayor Walter A. Sims, have promised cooperation in building a new unit for the school this year.

Three Plans Offered.
Following are suggestions outlined by W. C. Slate, member of the board from the second ward and a leader in the move for the new school building:

1. Sale of Fraser street lot, that part of the old Girls' High school property facing Mitchell street; the David Mayer lot on Marietta street, and any other school property not in use, to raise sufficient funds.

2. Revision of the city's January appropriation sheet in an attempt to find all or at least part of the necessary money.

3. Borrowing the necessary funds, or part of them, from local banks, the money to be paid back next year.

The matter was referred to the standing committee on buildings, grounds and equipment, with instructions to make appraisals to ascertain the value of unused school property and also to learn the amount needed for the new building, and report back to the board at the regular meeting next Tuesday.

Mr. Slate told of the need of a new unit, explaining that at present the school, which is the largest junior high school in Atlanta, in point of attendance, only has the old Hill Street school for quarters and that many students are forced to attend classes in the Commercial High school building.

Needs Are Emphasized.

W. E. Verney, Miss Birdie Moore, president of the Hoke Smith Parent-Teacher association, and several other speakers representing the delegation of more than 200 who attended the session, made plans for a new building.

W. W. Gaines, board member from the third ward, stated that the other three junior high schools were given new buildings under the bond issue building program and that the Hoke Smith school needed one worst of all. Oscar Mills, newly-elected member of the board from the ninth ward, who was attending the first meeting, urged the board to investigate fully before selling any school property and charged that in the past several pieces of property virtually have been given away by the board. On Mr. Mills' motion, the matter was referred to the standing committee of which Mrs. Z. V. Peterson is chairman.

$200,000 Required.
According to Mr. Slate and Mr. Gaines, Mayor Sims has promised to call a meeting of the finance committee in an effort to revise the sheet to find available funds for the new building and as a last resort, to borrow from the banks the amount needed to make the full amount in event that sale of unused school property fails to provide enough. It is estimated that the new unit will cost approximately $200,000.

Decision on the dispute over lockers at the O'Keefe Junior High school was deferred until the next meeting. Reports of a special committee, named to investigate conditions of lockers at the O'Keefe Junior High, Henry W. Grady High school for boys, and Booker T. Washington High school for negroes, showed that while lockers at the latter two schools are satisfactory, 27 per cent of those installed at the O'Keefe school are defective. Lockers were purchased last year from the Federal Steel Fixtures company.

Busy Session Ahead.
John T. Hancock, president of the board, stated that since adoption of the budget last month, it has been found that an additional $100,000 will be needed for the pay rolls account, and also that will be discussed at Tuesday's meeting.

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson reported that the board of county commissioners has set aside $24,500 for grading of school properties this year, and the current expenditures committee was authorized to proceed at once with plans for grading lots at the Henry W. Grady school.

ATLANTA MUSICIAN WEDS WELL-KNOWN NEW YORK ARTIST

New York, March 4.—(Special.)—Harry G. Henson, well-known musician, of Atlanta, was married here today to Miss Ellen Georgianna Rosar, 25, of New Orleans. They had been friends for some time. A month ago Henson obtained a divorce from his first wife, Mrs. Marie Henson, in St. Louis on grounds of desertion.

Miss Rosar, who is known as the stage singer under the name of "Demorest," is a singer and actress and well known on Broadway.

Henson came here from Atlanta a week ago and met Miss Rosar at her home. A tacit engagement had existed some time, it is said. Together they visited the marriage license bureau in the municipal building, left the bureau by a side door and hurried to an uptown church, where they were married. A number of friends of both were present. They expect to honeymoon at Bermuda and have not yet decided whether they will reside here or in Atlanta.

PLAN TO ENTERTAIN GENERAL PERSHING DELAYED TO SUNDAY

Havana, March 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—All plans for the entertainment of General Pershing and his party have been postponed until Sunday, with the possible exception of a visit by the American general to President Zayas.

General Pershing, who was taken ill Tuesday afternoon shortly after he arrived from Santiago de Cuba, spent today resting in his room at the hotel. He told visitors this afternoon he felt fine, but that his physician had advised him to rest for several days.

The Maine memorial will be dedicated on Sunday and the Cuban officials expect General Pershing to be present at the exercises.

MABRY AND WRIGHT INDICTED AT DECATUR

Decatur, Ga., March 4.—(Special.)—Indictments were returned here today against J. L. Mabry and D. W. Wright charging assault with intent to murder in connection with the shooting of N. J. Cash last December.

It is charged that the home of G. W. Collum where Cash was boarding was invaded by two men and a shooting affair took place. Miss Rosa Belle Jones, returning the fire, wounding the intruders, who police claim were Mabry and Wright.

STOREMAN ROBBED BY NEGRO BANDIT

William J. Smith, proprietor of a store located at 324 Decatur street, was held up and robbed Wednesday night by an unidentified negro who entered the establishment and found Smith alone. The negro ordered the proprietor to "hands up," and immediately rifled the cash drawer of $25 and took two pairs of shoes.

Mrs. Hill Has Novel Ideas On Harmonizing Colors

MRS. ALICE HILL.

Mrs. Alice Hill, who will conduct a 10-day class in interior art in Atlanta, beginning March 30, will include in her course the principles of color harmony and color combination.

Many think there are certain colors which can not be used together, but Mrs. Hill teaches that any two or three colors can be used to produce beauty and harmony if one knows how to unify those colors. Previous to all efforts have been directed to securing color harmony of differences instead of discovering the basis of unity. It is ridiculous, she says, to try to work out color combinations on the old basis of the so-called three primary colors, red, yellow and blue, for it has now been discovered that these are not the primary colors at all, because the prism which produces the spectrum is imperfect, and therefore what we have known as the colors of the spectrum are not the true primary colors. Since the discovery of color energy and the sending of radio energy, scientists have learned to break up light into perfect colors, and thus it is now known that there are ten perfect basic colors. Since this new discovery the law of complement of green, and blue is not the complement of yellow. They are merely near complements.

Mrs. Hill says that under the old theory one sometimes could produce perfect combinations, but more often these combinations were imperfect. When the perfect complements and combinations are used they can be harmonized by every one. It has been the imperfect knowledge of the science of colors that has heretofore made all combinations mostly guess work. Now, she contends, we can produce an infinite number of combinations and unlimited variations, all unified. A room can be decorated so that without changing the color from season to season it suggests coziness in the summer and warmth in the winter. One can tint an overlighted room without using dull colors, so that it appears soft and less brilliant when the sun is shining, and yet warm and glowing on a dull day. Also, one can color a poorly lighted room so that it appears bright and well lighted.

These classes will be conducted daily at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, and will be limited to 25.

NEW CITY CHARTER FIGHT CONTINUED FOR AGED WOMAN BY WOMEN VOTERS

Plans for the proposed campaign for a new charter in Atlanta, as well as discussion of the league's policy for a reduction of the size of the city democratic executive committee, will be taken up at a meeting of the Atlanta League of Women Voters at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon at Phillips & Crew hall, according to Mrs. R. L. Turman, president.

The league advocates cutting the size of the executive committee from 72 to 24, Mrs. Turman said, and also opposes holding the city primary prior to October 1.

"Few people realize the power that our democratic executive committee wields," Mrs. Turman stated. "It absolutely controls all laws governing our city primaries, which, of course, are our elections in the south. The efficiency of our entire government often depends on the purity of our city primaries. The democratic executive committee has conducted the elections very able, but, as in most things, there is always room for improvement. The league has many friends on the committee, and believes in working in harmony with all public officials as far as possible."

CRAVING FOR BATH PROVES UNDOING OF NEGRO PROWLER

Attentiveness to his toilet preparations proved the undoing Wednesday night of Moses Brown, aged negro, who sought out an abandoned house at 206 East Hunter street and entered to bathe and refresh himself.

The splashing of water in an improvised bath aroused suspicions of City Detectives Warren and McQuary, who chanced to be passing and Quarry to "peep." Jose fled into the damp and chilling darkness, clad only in a bath towel, but was overtaken in a few paces and carried to police station where it was discovered that he had appropriated gas and plumbing fixtures worth $200.

Mose objected vigorously to being placed in a cell without a bath tub, although he welcomed the lunk and the fact that his meals would be served during his sojourn as a guest of the city.

500 Crepe Myrtle Trees To Be Planted in Decatur Next Week by Citizens

Decatur, Ga., March 4.—(Special.)—Thursday, March 12, has been set as "Crepe Myrtle" day in Decatur, when it is expected 500 trees of that variety will be planted on the sidewalks, on the courthouse grounds, and in the yards of homes. Mrs. Henry B. Earhart is chairman of the committee of 30 citizens who will make a canvass for the sale of the trees, and Mrs. Roy G. Jones, president of the Decatur Women's club, will be at the court house on the morning of the twelfth to give out trees. It is expected the planting will be done in one day.

The tree planting is preliminary to "Clean-up" day, soon to be held, of which Charles D. McKinney is chairman. Mrs. W. S. Ekin, Jr., vice chairman, and Mrs. R. E. White is in charge of publicity.

Following the suggestion originally made by Agnes Lee chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, that Decatur citizens plant crepe myrtle trees, the Decatur Women's club is sponsoring the plant the next week, under the direction of Mrs. W. S. Young, civic chairman of the Women's club.

SELECT JURY BY STUDY OF HAND IN KLAN TRIAL

Houston, Texas, March 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—Chirogony, or character reading by examination of individual's hands, first introduced in selection of prospective jurors in a district court here yesterday, continued in preliminaries connected with a Ku Klux Klan trial here today.

E. J. Clarke, of Houston, former district judge, of Waco, and at one time imperial giant, or general attorney, for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Incorporated, with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., explained to the court that while most people read a man's character by his features he determines it by the hands.

"I have never been led astray by my deductions," he said, "and it certainly casts no reflection on the prospective jurors."

When the first juror was asked to place his hand on a square of cardboard, opposing attorneys craned their necks. When a second juror likewise was asked to submit to Mr. Clarke's unusual method, opposing attorneys objected to "this examination of jurors by signs or symbols."

"There are no signs," said Mr. Clarke. "I am merely applying what I term a very perfect science in determining the temperament of a juror."

District Judge Ewing Boyd held that Mr. Clarke was within his rights and the examination proceeded.

The suit is by the national order of the Klan against George R. Kimbro, Jr., of Houston, former grand broker of the Mississippi domain, to recover $25,000 which the Klan claimed he had failed to pay over. Kimbro filed a cross suit for $500,000 damages against the Klan, claiming that its officers had entered into a conspiracy to damage his character.

Service Bureau Chief Lauds Chamber of Commerce Work

Declaring that the city is best whose people are more enlightened, contented, happy and prosperous, and that the chamber of commerce is the organization through which these things could be fostered, Colvin B. Brown, chief of the organization service bureau of the national chamber of commerce, addressed the Atlanta forum committee Wednesday at the chamber building.

"It is the province of the chamber of commerce to rally, organize and direct the two forces of each city, the one that makes for conservation and growth and the other for deterioration and decay," he said.

"People are entitled to know that the city chamber is well organized before they put forth their efforts to make the community what it should be. This organization should be for the betterment of the community and not for the interest of a group of individuals."

Men Must Fit Job.
"The organization should be well founded around a group of good businessmen. The men and the job should fit each other as nearly as possible. A budget based upon the work that is to be done, the revenue for which is obtained from dues-paying members is an essential," Mr. Brown said.

"Following good organization the work will begin and the chamber should never lose sight of the fact that the community does not end with the municipal boundaries. Aid as much as possible the tributary communities. It will always pay."

"Another subject demanding attention is transportation. It is a wise idea to have an active transportation committee to study the situation in the trade territory and formulate plans for removal of obstructions."

"Prepare not on everything-at-once program but one thing-at-a-time, the most immediate and the necessary things, and as rapidly as the public can be made to see the need and apply the remedy." This was a point stressed by the authority on organization and chamber activities.

Mr. Brown stated that industry, commerce and civics should all have a place on the program of the organization work. Each chamber should have a city plan. "We should vision our city as we want it to be, and as we are determined to make it, and with this idea in mind the organization should constantly strive to make the dream come true," he said.

Stresses Retail Trade.
Mr. Brown emphasized the important community asset of the retail stores of the city. "It is the store that brings the farmer to town and the chamber should aid them in every way. In many cities chambers have organized a number of young men groups and have noted lecturers to address them on salesmanship and other important subjects which will aid business," he asserted.

"If you can plan to improve production and transportation facilities, being about better relations in industry, increase and improve retail trade, stimulate your sales force to greater and more intelligent effort and better living, you will have taken your part in the national program," he declared.

In closing Mr. Brown added: "We may each do our bit in our own community with the tools at our command, always having in mind that whatever of betterment we bring to ourselves we bring to the nation of which we are a part."

Added to the interesting program was a number of vocal solos by C. T. Davis, accompanied at the piano by Miss Anna Leah Spears.

Print This Good News About Joint-Ease Writes Eastern Druggist

"Joint-Ease is selling like hot cakes in a store located in New Jersey. It is a wonderful and speedy remedy for all joint troubles."

"But why not impress on tens of thousands of suffering people some of the things that dozens of my customers tell me almost daily."

"Some say that it knocks out humbug over night—others assert that for chest colds and sore throat it has no equal, while many insist that there is nothing they ever tried that is so efficient for neuralgia, neuritis and even colds and nasal catarrh."

Answering the above letter, we, the makers of Joint-Ease, know that what the thriving New Jersey druggist says is true, but we still maintain that Joint-Ease is prepared for stiff, inflamed, painful swollen joints, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, fingers or spine.

You'll like to use penetrating Joint-Ease, for with just one minute's rubbing, it soaks in through the flesh directly to the ailing bones and ligaments—that's why it succeeds—for when Joint-Ease gets in joint misery gets out—And without any waste of time all swelling and congestion disappears. ## The HERALDS OF PROGRESS

THE biggest telephone construction program ever undertaken by this company during any one year was that completed last year by the forces of the Southern Group of Bell Telephone Companies, operating in the nine States of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, the Carolinas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The investment in new and additional plant, the gain in new stations and the number of subscribers served and calls completed was the greatest in the history of these companies.

The telephone workers did a bigger and better job and your service is now more extensive, more efficient and more valuable to you than ever before. The results of last year's efforts reflect achievements in which you, as a telephone subscriber, have a more than ordinary interest.

In presenting the details of last year's work, we not only observe our policy of taking the public fully into our confidence, but also enable you to be familiar with the progress of this essential industry.

Last year the telephone workers of the Southern Group installed 147,473 new telephones and removed 91,580, making a net gain of 55,893 new stations and involving gross additions to plant of approximately $16,354,370.

not including operating properties purchased.

This enormous sum was practically all new money, which was secured from the sale of new securities or borrowed in the money markets.

The companies now render service to 1,056,809 telephone stations in nine States. These consist of 699,415 owned stations, 319,007 stations of other companies connected with the system and 38,387 telephones in farm homes.

The companies' investment in service as of December 31, 1924, was $122,749,324, not including $2,599,652 of construction work in progress on that date.

The investment in service of $122,749,324 includes such property as 865 central offices, with their local and long distance switchboards and other central office equipment and apparatus; 2,243,409 miles of wire (3.3 miles per telephone); 38,313 miles of pole line, 2,515 miles of underground duct, and the station equipment associated with more than 699,400 telephone stations.

To manage, operate, maintain and build this extensive system requires the services of 17,100 men and women, or one worker for every 40 telephones. The annual payroll amounted to $17,652,684 last year, an average of about $1,032 per year per employee.

Fine Arts Club To Present Play

The Fine Arts club will present "The Chastening" at the Woman's club auditorium on Tuesday afternoon, March 10, at 2:30 o'clock. In bringing this five-act play to Atlanta, the officers of the Fine Arts club feel they are advancing a step farther in the dramatic world.

George Bernard Shaw said of the London production of "The Chastening": "A magnificent play, magnificently acted." It is a spiritual and artistic masterpiece. Amusing and original, it possesses the comedy and humanity of "The Servant in the House," the profound emotional appeal of "The Terrible Meek" with the cleansing and sublimity of both those plays. Dealing with a simple domestic situation common to every home in the world, it is the play par excellence of family life, wherein every parent, every child, may see himself written large, his problems probed to the depths, interpreted, sanctified, and lifted to the higher where they belong. Its sacred beauty claims the love of every religion—Catholic, Protestant, Hebrew, Masonic, Secularist. It is a play to unify all creeds.

Mrs. Montgomery Honor Guest At Dinner Party

Major and Mrs. John S. Cohen entertained at dinner Wednesday evening at the Piedmont Driving club in compliment to Mrs. John Seymour Montgomery, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is the distinguished guest of Mrs. Robert Argos.

The elegantly-appointed table was covered with an imported lace cloth and graced in the center by a large plate of jonquils. Smaller plateaus of these lovely flowers were placed at intervals alternating with silver candlesticks holding unshaded yellow tapers.

Mrs. Cohen wore a handsome gown of black lace fashioned over black satin.

Mrs. Montgomery's gown of powder blue crepe was combined with cream lace.

Covers were placed for a group of close friends of the honor guest.

Mrs. Mary L. Groover, one of Georgia's most talented and delightful dramatic readers, will present the remarkable play "Sun-Up," by Lula Vollmer, Monday afternoon as a special feature of the Atlanta Woman's club meeting.

Mrs. Groover's home is in Columbus, Ga. Upon her return from Europe, she found her progressive work going forward for Tallulah Falls school, and being intensely interested in its success, decided to give her talents to the splendid cause by making a tour of the state, giving Miss Vollmer's play as a reading for the benefit of the school.

The Atlanta Woman's club will present Mrs. Groover, not only to its members, but to the club women of the district. All those interested in the remarkable work going forward for the mountain school are invited to hear the play read, at the invitation of the executive board of the Woman's club.

A beautiful interpretation of "Sun-Up" was given recently in Columbus by Mrs. Groover, when it proved a marked success from an artistic and social standpoint. Many engagements have been made by the reader throughout the state and much pleasure is anticipated from these readings by the club women who stand for the cultural advancement of the south. Mrs. Groover possesses a soft, gentle voice, which is typical of the southern woman, and presents her various readings in the most attractive manner. She is a graduate of Boston conservatory, and studied for a time under the famous Colby dramatic instructor of this city.

"Sun-Up," which was written by an Atlanta woman, Miss Lula Vollmer, is especially adapted to the presentation of the Georgia club woman, since the mountain school at Tallulah Falls brings into its fold the same type of characters depicted in the remarkable story from Miss Vollmer's pen, and this school is the cherished institution of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs.

The joint recital of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hodgson on Tuesday evening at the Georgia club, was a rare treat to music lovers.

Mr. Hodgson, famous pianist of two continents, began his recital with Rachmaninoff's famous prelude in C sharp minor. The true artist endeavors to dig deep into the soul of the composer and reveal the enchanting music of his work, and Mr. Hodgson succeeded in interpreting the prelude in the most satisfying manner. He begins the composition in a slow, quiet mood, and then gradually works up to the time to allegretto, and then allegro, ending the second movement in a powerful climax of melody. The third movement begins allegro and maintains this style throughout until nearly the end, when it gradually subsides into Lydian measures, soft and pathetic, dying away like the last whispers of a prayer.

Mr. Hodgson played a number of exquisite selections, the most beautiful of which, if one may make distinctions when tastes vary so much, were the Spinning Song of Mendelssohn's, Olsen's Butterflies and Schytte's intermezzo. Rubenstein's Barcarolle in G minor, famous concert piece, was one of the favorite pieces, and was rendered with originality which was new, but very pleasing.

The sensation of the evening was the duo art recital of Mr. Hodgson and Mrs. Hodgson, when he played a "duet" with the mechanical device in such a manner that those who could not tell his fingers could not have detected any difference. As one of the great artists, there is a rare combination of intelligence and talent noticeable in all Mr. Hodgson's work. As an accompanist he is an excellent, and possesses the musical intuition necessary for that part of his work.

Mrs. Hodgson shared equal honors of the occasion in the rendition of a group of beautiful songs, accompanied by Mr. Hodgson. Her first song was Gounod's famous "serenade." When she sang "Hark, Hark, the Lark," of Schubert's, one could fully appreciate the fine, cultivated qualities of her soprano voice. In "The Star," by Rogers, Mrs. Hodgson sang brilliantly, but displayed a dramatic instinct so necessary in the rendition of this beautiful song. Her high notes were well taken and sustained in perfect poise. With a radiant personality, a lovely face and an exquisitely toned voice, Mrs. Hodgson is the consummate artist. Her selections left nothing to be desired, all of them being of a bright and happy nature, and a vehicle for the displaying of her thorough training in technique and expression. Perhaps the most pleasing melody, the music composed by Mr. Hodgson and sung by Mrs. Hodgson, were the most enjoyed of all the beautiful songs.

Hodgson Recital

At 'Gravestone' Is

Highly Praised

The joint recital of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hodgson on Tuesday evening at the Georgia club, was a rare treat to music lovers.

Mr. Hodgson, famous pianist of two continents, began his recital with Rachmaninoff's famous prelude in C sharp minor. The true artist endeavors to dig deep into the soul of the composer and reveal the enchanting music of his work, and Mr. Hodgson succeeded in interpreting the prelude in the most satisfying manner. He begins the composition in a slow, quiet mood, and then gradually works up to the time to allegretto, and then allegro, ending the second movement in a powerful climax of melody. The third movement begins allegro and maintains this style throughout until nearly the end, when it gradually subsides into Lydian measures, soft and pathetic, dying away like the last whispers of a prayer.

Mr. Hodgson played a number of exquisite selections, the most beautiful of which, if one may make distinctions when tastes vary so much, were the Spinning Song of Mendelssohn's, Olsen's Butterflies and Schytte's intermezzo. Rubenstein's Barcarolle in G minor, famous concert piece, was one of the favorite pieces, and was rendered with originality which was new, but very pleasing.

The sensation of the evening was the duo art recital of Mr. Hodgson and Mrs. Hodgson, when he played a "duet" with the mechanical device in such a manner that those who could not tell his fingers could not have detected any difference. As one of the great artists, there is a rare combination of intelligence and talent noticeable in all Mr. Hodgson's work. ## Fort McPherson Plans Gala Day for Atlanta, March 8

The Twenty-Second Infantry Athletic association, which is composed of all members of that famous old army regiment, has arranged a gala day for those who desire to take advantage of it at Fort McPherson on Sunday, March 8. Appreciating the fact that novelty is the spice of life, the committee in charge, with Major H. J. Keeley, as chairman, has decided to attempt to show the people of Atlanta a few of the sports, drills and parades that the army can well be proud of. There will be a mule polo game between Company D and the service company at 1:30 o'clock, and another mule game between Company H and Company M at 2 o'clock.

These games should afford much amusement, as there is great rivalry between the mounted organizations of the regiment. The game is played on mules, regular army mules that are not trained in any way, and in a great many cases, object to being ridden, to say nothing of the objections they have for the aristocratic game of polo. The player rides without saddle, uses a broom as a mallet, and a soccer ball is used as the ball.

It is evidenced from the above that those games will afford many thrills and much laughter. Sergeant Albert (Packey) Fallon, of the service company, will be seen in action on his famous mule, Barney Google. This soldier claims that he has trained this mule to follow the ball and even kick it to its objective.

The mule polo game will be followed by the crack drill company of the Twenty-Second Infantry that has been declared the best drilled unit in the south. This company has been drilled at the Fort Valley Peach festival, the opening of the Spring Street bridge viaduct, the American Legion display at Lakewood last fall, and some of the leading colleges of the south. The drill brings forth the finer points of the drill as used in the army, with Captain A. H. Bolling as captain of the company, and aided by the Twenty-Second Infantry band.

The drill will be immediately followed by a polo game between the Governor's Horse Guard and the polo team of Fort McPherson. These two teams are very evenly matched and the thrills that attend a polo game will certainly prevail. This game will give the people an opportunity of seeing the best polo match in the city, together with seeing some wonderful horsemanship.

Following the polo game, or at about 4:30 o'clock, there will be a regimental review of the Twenty-Second Infantry by Governor Walker. The parades and reviews at the fort on Friday have been well attended and greatly enjoyed. Tea will be served in the mess hall of Company I following the review. Assisting in the entertainment will be Mrs. Andrew Hatfield, Mrs. August Malenowski, Mrs. John E. Peterson, Mrs. William Rhud, Mrs. J. M. Kline, Mrs. F. E. Hatfield, Mrs. G. W. Thompson, Mrs. L. J. Lamar, and Mrs. A. M. Odell.

The public is cordially invited to attend, and a committee in charge will be on hand to insure those attending a pleasant afternoon.

Splendid Program Given Wednesday Before Music Club

Miss Margaret Hecht, program chairman of the Atlanta Music club morning musicale at the Biltmore Wednesday, presented an unusually fine program devoted entirely to opera from the works of French, Italian, Russian and German composers. The outstanding numbers were the Finale from "La Boheme," sung by Mrs. Robert Cooney and Byron Warner; Finale from "Faust," sung by Miss Minna Hecker, John Mullins and Byron Warner; and the two male choruses from "The Huguenots," sung by the Emory Glee club under the direction of Dr. M. H. Dewey. Miss Hecker, lyric soprano, delighted the audience with her clarion work in "Casta Diva" from "Norma." In the Hymn To the Sun from "Coq d'Or" Miss Hecker's voice was very musical and appealing. Mrs. H. S. Carswell, in "La Ciccia," "La Gioconda," displayed a beautiful contralto voice, rich in quality and even throughout the entire range. Mrs. Carswell also sang with equal color, "Amour, Viens Aider" from "Samson et Dalila." Miss Rosline Trimble sang "Oh, Breezes Gently Wafted" from "Lohengrin." Miss Trimble's young voice seems suited to these ethereal lines Wagner gave to Elsa in her blissful reverie of her betrothal on the morrow. G. C. Martin, a coming baritone, received much applause for his interpretation of The Evening Star from "Tannhauser." Byron Warner's singing of Lohengrin, which by the way is his first venture in Wagnerian work, although meritorious, his best work was in "Manon" and "La Boheme." Mr. Warner always makes one feel his genuine enjoyment in singing and a confidence in his musicianship. The Emory Glee club can not be praised too highly for its splendid work. The numbers were Orgy and Ratanaplan from "The Huguenots." Their attacks, dismissals and rhythm were most satisfactory. Mrs. Charles Chalmers, the accompanist, played brilliantly, giving artist support to the singers. H. KNOX SPAIN.

Rare Charm and Distinction of Style

Expressed in Terms of

Spring Coats

The coat's the thing, undoubtedly, for wear these springtime days. Never was a style more popular and never was better cause for such popularity.

There is indeed a rare charm and distinction of style found in our showing of coats for spring that no previous season has known.

Such slender grace of line, one could not look otherwise than youthful when wearing one! Such exquisite beauty of color, of design, and of fabric! The new saucy flare effect at the front hem line is quite irresistible.

New Fabrics and Models

Especially interesting are the models developed in the new fabrics of cote de cheval, silk Ottoman, Jeweltone and in handsome satins, bengalines and charmees. Models are very straight and slender and may tie just in front at a low waistline.

Interesting Colors---Trimmings

Sea, land and sky have all lent their colorings to the fabrics that fashion these charming coats—shades as varied and lovely as nature herself dons for spring wear.

There is an exceptionally interesting display of black coats.

Trimmings feature most unusual appliques, embroideries and the most beautiful of the summer furs.

Did you ever compare the taste of a freshly picked tomato with the taste of one picked a week ago?
That picked-this-morning taste in Heinz Tomato Ketchup is due to the fact that less than a day elapses from the tomatoes on the vine to the tomato ketchup in the bottle.

Read Mrs. Benedict's Letter Praising Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Kewanee, Illinois.—"When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I had no children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run-down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines to any I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think it mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood. It would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my teens and until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MARY R. XXII—MORE COMPLICATIONS.

"The next morning Nathalie Jordan telephoned me.

"Nancy," she said, "I wish you'd come to see me please, right away—I want your advice."

That rather pleased me. She was older than I, had had more experience of the world. Yet she wanted my advice! I had realized that I knew more than she did about some things, but I had not dared hope that she would ever think that I did.

I dressed as fast as I could, and went to her mother's apartment, where she was staying.

"She was standing before her dressing table when I came in, fastening a street frock. She looked stunning. I was only the wealthy girl who could have ever turned from her to the rather cheap girls with whom I went about so much."

"It's about Mr. Leland that I want to speak to you," she said, and I sat down on a divan that stood in the window. "I might as well be frank with you, Nancy, and tell you that he has told me that he loves me, and has asked me to marry him if I divorce my husband."

"For a moment I couldn't answer. I could hear the thumping of his heart, but he didn't love her; a man like him can't care much about anyone but himself. Yet I could not tell her that, for if I did she would never believe me."

I disapproved of her husband, of course, but I felt sure that if he could be made to realize how wonderful she was, he would mend his ways, and be a model husband.

"I felt sure, too, that she really cared for him still. If she thought of divorcing him, it was only because she was convinced that he no longer cared for her."

"What shall I do?" she asked, "I don't know. Yet I feel that there's no use in going on as I have. You're more modern than I am, and though you're so young, you know a good deal about married men, especially! Shall I go to Paris and get a divorce, and let this man try to make me happy—or shall I go on as I have been, lonely, unhappy, leading a life that means nothing to anyone?"

"Oh, you needn't be unhappy and lonely," I exclaimed, "I'll take a little longer before you decide. Somehow, well, I'd hate to see you marry Leland."

"But am I am to go through life again because?" she did not finish that sentence, but I could finish it for her. "Because you would have to live with a man who would never love you, because you would have to live with a man who would never love you."

"How long have you and Mr. Jordan been separated?" I asked.

"Nineteen years. During most of that time I have traveled, but now I can't go on that way any longer. I want a home of my own, where I can settle down with my friends. My life is empty, meaningless."

"I wanted to tell her that while it would no longer be empty if she married Leland, it certainly would not be filled as she wanted it to be. I had seen enough of the world to know that women like her are easy prey for the good-looking, attractive young man who wants money and doesn't care how he causes to suffer so that he can get it. I knew that he would not hesitate to marry her, but without a penny when he had got possession of her fortune."

"I realized that if I was going to get out of this broken marriage I'd have to get it immediately."

"I tried wildly to think of some plan. If I could just get the Jordans together, make them realize that they still cared for each other, everything would be all right. Yet how could I do it? And my plan for making Mr. Jordan jealous of his wife, how would that work out?"

"She said I saw the way to accomplish what I wanted to do. I turned quickly to Mrs. Jordan.

"I'll have to run—I quite forgot a luncheon engagement that I made yesterday," I told her. "I believe you're right about divorcing your husband and marrying Leland, after all—you can't go on any longer. Why don't you talk it over with your hus-

If your hair is very dry after a shampoo, and becomes disheveled because of this, you can brush it into place if you give it a drop or two of oil spread over the entire head of hair. To do this perfectly, drop the oil into your palm and with a clean dry hairbrush, run the edge of the bristles across the palm, and then brush the hair with it. More oil than a few drops would make the hair oily so it attracts soil; and to use as much oil as you suggest means soiled handbuds and bed linen.

SYNOPSIS.

The story is being told by young Lindridge, junior member of a New York firm of lawyers, old Jerome Fodick, of the richest clients of the firm, invites Lindridge to lunch at his home. The young lawyer is interested in the old man's granddaughter, Sara, a beautiful young society woman, who is Fodick's sole heir. Fodick tells Lindridge that Sara's father, his only son, had spent many years in South America, where he died. After his death a South American woman appeared at the Fodick home with baby Sara whose mother, this woman said, had died soon after the baby's father. Fodick had investigated the woman's story and found it to be true.

After lunch Lindridge, a famous psychic, calls on Fodick and tells him she had been an intimate friend of Sara's mother in Buenos Aires, when Sara was in infancy and that when she had to leave the city on a theatrical tour she had left with Sara's mother all her jewels and a large sum of money. When she returned to Buenos Aires, Fodick was dead and her property had disappeared. She just succeeded in tracing them, and demands that Fodick return her jewels and the money with interest. A few days later the old man is found dead in his bed. The case is in the hands of Police Inspector Curran. Lindridge tells him about Madam Adelson's demands and informs him that the medium had carried with her a list of jewels which had belonged to Sara's mother and written in the latter's handwriting, identical to a list in Sara's possession.

Before Lindridge is able to have Mr. Fodick's safe, which contains important letters, opened, it is mysteriously drilled and rifled. Curran and Lindridge hasten over to the Fodick home, and find that the letters are missing. The inspector questions Herbert, curator of the museum, and the old man's secretary, Miss O'Connor. Both have good alibis. Herbert claims he spent the hours between 6 and 11 at the house of Professor Markham but admits he allowed a Professor Quigley, known to him slightly, to remain in the room alone during the afternoon. Lindridge, a famous criminal lawyer of New York, is Adelson's attorney. He invites Fodick to dinner at his apartment, where he informs the younger lawyer his client is about to sue Sara Fodick for the money and jewels she claims she left with Sara's mother. He advises Lindridge to have Sara settle the affair out of court.

Graham Smith, a nephew who covered the Fodick death for his paper, tells Lindridge that he saw Sara Fodick in a downtown restaurant the night of the robbery with a crook known as Lord Harry. Afraid that Sara will meet with harm Lindridge goes to the Fodick home to warn her. While there Curran telephones to say that Herbert had been killed on the street. Miss O'Connor faints at the news, under the impression that the victim is her brother, Lord Harry, and not Herbert, who is almost her double. She revives when Lord Harry walks into the house. Sara had engaged him to open the safe for her, but he found the safe had already been opened.

INSTALLMENT XXVIII.

A SHREWD GUESS.

I asked Lord Harry why he stayed so long in the museum the night of the robbery when he found the safe empty.

"Partly to make sure that the letters I was to get were not there," he answered, "and partly to decide who had done the job."

"Was Miss Fodick with you?"

"No. I saw her later in a downtown restaurant where we had agreed to meet."

"You were entirely alone in the museum then?"

"My sister was with me. She helped me search for the letters."

"And neither of you removed anything from the safe—for Miss Fodick, of course."

"Really!" he drawled, and then his eyes twinkled, "there was nothing left that interested Miss Fodick, my sister, or myself."

I shot my next question at him suddenly.

"Do you know Heywood Achison, the criminal lawyer?"

There was a slight twitch in a muscle in the side of his face, which showed I had taken him by surprise, but he recovered himself immediately.

"Most people in my line do know him, or know of him," he shrugged his shoulders. Then he abandoned his flawless ease; his face hardened.

"Tell me one thing, Mr. Lindridge, how the devil does Achison come into this?"

"Well, as Madam Adelson's attorney, he was willing, no doubt, to pay a high price for those letters, and I'm sure as one can be of anything that he has them now."

"I see," softly, "and you think—"

"Somebody did," I answered. "I am merely pointing out to you, at present, the possibility that either you or your sister might have—"

"Hold hard there," he interrupted, "rather than have Cathleen brought into this, I will tell you something. That safe was robbed by an old fellow called the Missionary."

"We already knew the Missionary opened the safe, but we also know he had absolutely no opportunity to get the letters to Achison."

"Then Haworth—Herbert handed them over."

"Herbert's movements are equally well known. He was shadowed every step of the way he took that night, and since then he has, of course, been watched constantly."

"Strange," he muttered, "there's a missing link somewhere. And yet not so strange, after all, with Achison pulling the strings."

He gave an impatient twitch of the shoulders.

"This is a lot more serious than I thought. I know Adelson, the old faker, and all of her crowd. She's as devilish and cunning as a cobra. I haven't much doubt that she retired old Mr. Fodick, or arranged for it; and he isn't the first notch on her stiletto by any means. But you can figure on her to some extent. What I mean is that she only has so many moves at her command, and they can be reckoned in advance and guarded against. With Achison behind her though. My word! It is like putting human intelligence into a poison gas shell. One can't guess where it will strike next. Really, I am afraid even Miss Fodick may be in some danger."

I didn't care to have him see how hard any suggestion of this sort hit me.

"I don't think so," I said. "In the first place, the inspector has made every provision for her protection; and in the second place, the nature of their scheme is a guarantee of her safety. They think she will come across to avoid publicity."

"Yes—" thoughtfully, "but Miss Fodick has started in to fight; trust them to know what her attitude is. And she is clever, very, and quite fearless. Trust them to know that, too. And she is determined to bring the murderer of her grandfather to book. The odds are that she will give them a run for their money. Then they will act. What if they do have to abandon the blackmail feature? They have a claim, and it is good against her estate. Achison will see to that."

"Starving!" Sara came into the room, "well, relief is in sight. Parley has just informed me that dinner is served. Your sister, she smiled at Lord Harry, 'is much better. Mrs. Hayes gave her a sedative, and she is probably asleep by this time. She means to keep the poor little thing in bed tomorrow, though. I don't wonder she was frightened. I was myself. The fact that you were late, and that you, as Mr. Herbert's double, might be approaching the house at just that time, was enough, to send the cold shivers down anyone's spine."

Lord Harry hunched up one shoulder.

"All my lucky stars were out," he said, "and thanks be that Curran's watch dogs forced me to a detour. Herbert was on his way to confession, I suppose?"

I was surprised at the shrewdness of his guess, if it was a guess.

"He was on his way to keep an appointment with the inspector when it happened," I said.

"His old game," the corner of Lord Harry's lip lifted contemptuously. "Did he telephone to Curran? Yes, of course, he would. Poor fool! Didn't he know somebody would be listening in on every message that went in or out of this house? But he always lost his wits whenever he was in one of his tantrums."

Sara rose. "I explained you to Parley and Mrs. Hayes," she said to Lord Harry, "I knew they would both be dying with curiosity, so I told them you were Miss O'Connor's brother and she had let you in at the museum door."

We followed her into the dining room, but during dinner, by tacit if unspoken consent, none of us referred to the subject uppermost in our thoughts. With Parley hovering about, we were taking no chances.

It was Lord Harry who saved the situation. He was so casual, so entirely at ease, that the background of tragedy receded a little; it no longer appeared so imminent and threatening. He talked a good deal in his whimsical, fascinating way, and yet he made no effort to monopolize the conversation. On the contrary, he drew Sara and myself into it so skillfully, that before we realized it, we also were talking more freely and naturally.

After we had adjourned to the library, though, and had satisfied ourselves that no one was eavesdropping, I put the question to him that I had been longing to ask for the last hour, phrasing it as tactfully as I could.

"I got the impression, Mr. O'Connor, from something you said, that you know considerably more about Herbert's past life than the rest of us do. Is it going too far to ask you how you came by that knowledge?"

For an instant his eyes bored through me, and then he dismissed caution with a flip of his fingers.

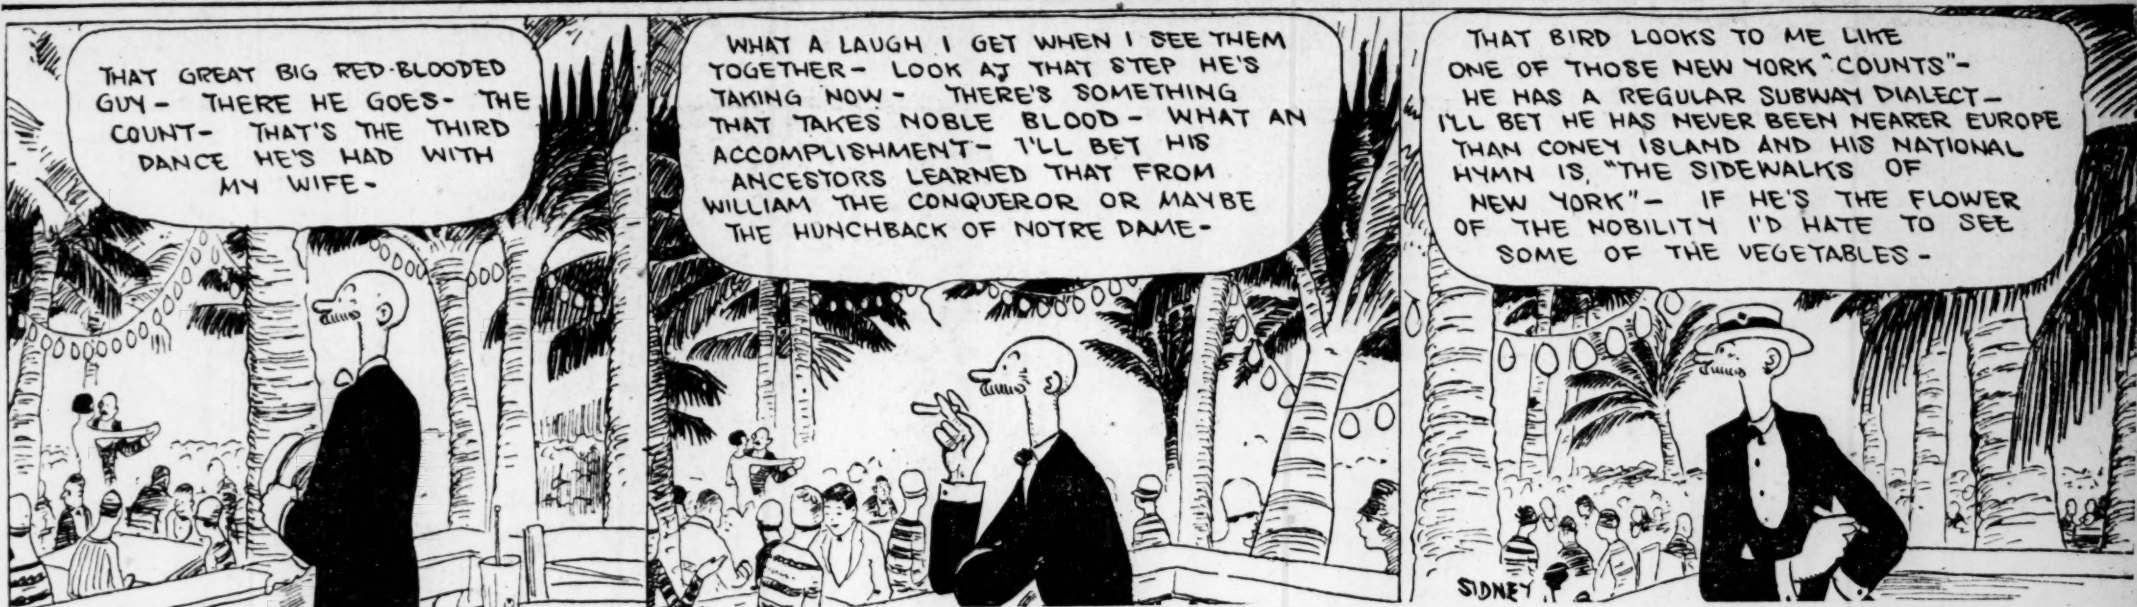

"The cut of the cards has made us partners," he said. "I have been drawn into this affair without my volition, and through Cathleen, of all people!" This amused him, but he became serious at once. "I do know more about Edwin Haworth, or Herbert, as you know him, than any other living person, probably. We grew up together; he was the strangest combination I ever met. What they call on the turf an in and outer, born that way. He couldn't run straight with anybody, even himself."

"It was a case of double personality, perhaps. That's the only way I can account for him. For long stretches, the Dr. Jekyll side of him would be on top, a cultivated student of art in all its forms, an authority on periods, the ideal museum director. Then he would suddenly reverse, and become Mr. Hyde. Hardly that either; for he was never a ruffian. He had the soul of a spaniel, timid and cowardly. Nothing but positive proof could ever make me believe that he had any hand in the murder of Mr. Fodick, or ever knew in advance that it was planned."

A SEAL STORY.
By Dr. Walter E. Traprock.

One of my most profitable adventures was when, as a young man, I was prospecting among the vast salt deposits of southern Russia. These lie at a level considerably lower than that of the nearby Caspian sea. During the course of a severe storm the Caspian broke its bounds and flowed into a salt bed which I had just staked out. With the rushing waters came countless fish. Two weeks later my temporary lake had seceded away or evaporated, and I found it bed filled with every imaginable kind of fish, already salted and ready to market.

keep indefinitely made me careless, and I delayed too long. During the heavy fall rains the nearby Tchikla river overflowed its banks, swept into my saltery and carried most of my fish into the Caspian. But this ironic trick of Fate was not the end. Not far out in the Caspian, at the point where the river flood boiled into the sea, was a reef densely populated by seals.

They fell gluttonously upon my fish, gorged themselves to repletion and died miserably of thirst by the hundreds. What I had lost in the fish business I made up a hundred fold in my harvest of seal-skins.

(Here Dr. Traprock paused, and there was a twinkle in his eye which suggested that we were, perhaps, to take his seal story with a grain of the salt with which it so profitably started.—Editor.)

GASOLINE ALLEY—SH! DON'T TELL WALT A WORD ABOUT THIS

The South's Best Read and Most Useful Newspaper!!

The following letter from the head of The Constitution's Information Bureau in Washington speaks for itself:

Editor Constitution: I want to congratulate you on the response to the offers of The Atlanta Constitution last week to serve your readers from your Washington Information Bureau. We received 2,651 letters in this office during the week from Constitution readers and informative replies or printed "bulletins" were mailed to all of them by Saturday night, February 7.

My records show that we served 41,853 of your readers in the 52 weeks from the week beginning January 6, 1924, to the week ending January 3, 1925. This is a number equaling well above 50% of the circulation of THE CONSTITUTION editions in which you used the offers and proves the great drawing power of THE CONSTITUTION.

It was about June 1, if you will remember, when you began intensive use of the service—I mean, when THE CONSTITUTION began to run the offers of this bureau in a conspicuous way. If this is continued until next June 1, there is no doubt that the record will show a response equal to nearly or quite 100% of your circulation.

It is evident that the people want your bulletins; they ask for them in great numbers when they really see the offers.

Congratulations and best wishes.
Washington, February 9, 1925.

S. T. HUGHES.

(Editor's Note: Mr. Hughes' report for the week ending February 14, showed 2,234 letters received; for the week ending February 21, the report showed 2,528 letters.)

BUT THIS IS NOT ALL---

During the same week, between 1,400 and 1,500 women readers of The Constitution ordered dress patterns from this newspaper's fashion bureau.

Between 200 and 300 other women readers wrote Miss Forbes, The Constitution's beauty expert, asking advice.

All of these in addition to the hundreds of letters that came to Dr. Brady, THE FUN SHOP, and the other outstanding features which appear in The Constitution.

Just Keeping Up the Record

And just a few weeks previous the young folks had shown their interest in The Constitution by sending in more than 9,000 letters addressed to their little friend, Chester Gump.

Then to cap the climax, this was followed by a veritable avalanche of mail as a result The Constitution's Twin contest.

First came from the postoffice large bundles of mail; then single sacks; then it took mail trucks to bring the dozens of sacks that came in each mail. By the time the last package had been received there was no single office in The Constitution building big enough to hold all of them, and they had to be stacked ten feet deep in a half dozen rooms. The crew of clerks which had been designated to the duty of checking the answers in the contest would have been busy for months, so more clerks had to be detached from their regular work to tackle the tremendous job.

For more than sixty years The Constitution has been a household necessity in the South and this has been true because its service is not limited. Its features are of equal value to men, women and children, and this is the reason that "once a Constitution subscriber, always a Constitution subscriber," is so notably true.

It is also why the readers of The Constitution say it is a great newspaper and an invaluable aid to the home

In the heart of the desert there is an oasis like a sea of sparkles to the weary traveler---It gives him new life. The caravan is halted---the pilgrim, on his bended knees, gives thanks to Allah for "Roccho-Bloa" which means, Soil of Blue: For it is here that nature has endowed her color upon the soil, to remain forever and anon. In all the world there is no place just like it.

You want to see it---and to see it you must hear the tinkle of the camel's bell.

But rest on, we will tell you on the morrow when to be ready to resume the journey on.

JUDGE GARY PRAISES SPEECH OF COOLIDGE

New York, March 4.—Praising President Coolidge's inaugural address as "a masterpiece" which "will have an influence for good throughout the entire world," Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, said the message "advocates peace, tranquility, prosperity and protection for every person and every interest everywhere."

"The speech contains no basis for reasonable objection by any one," Mr. Gary said. "It can not be successfully assailed on moral grounds or in any material respect relating to social, political or economic matters. It is fair and friendly toward all classes and groups of the inhabitants of the United States and toward all nations and nationalities throughout the world."

THEATER GUILD MEMBERS PLAN MANY FEATURES

Plans for a children's department of the theater guild of Atlanta, approved by the executive board at a meeting Tuesday night, will be presented to members of the guild at their meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the Henry Grady hotel.

The plan was drawn by a special committee composed of Mrs. W. J. Davis, chairman; Mrs. Roy Aldenderfer, Mrs. Duane Thomas Yould, Mrs. Charles E. LaFayette, Mrs. J. P. Wilhoit, Mrs. Joseph Reed and Mrs. John S. Cook.

The meeting tonight will be open to all who are interested in community dramatics and the development of Atlanta and Georgia talent along lines of playwriting and interpretation, it is said.

"Realities," by Rossiter Chance and Gladys Crisler, students of Oglethorpe university, which is to be produced by the guild, will be read to illustrate the type of plays planned for production. Critics have pronounced this play one of the leading folk drama of recent years.

Dr. Thorndell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe, will speak on the general subject of play writing and its development and production in Atlanta.

George Bush, dramatic chairman, will announce casts for plays now in rehearsal, including "The Dover Road," "Clarence," "Seventeen," and "East of Eden," written by Miss Mary Brent Whitehead, a member of the guild.

"An Interlude," by Mrs. Joseph Reed, will be presented with a number of songs, accompanied by Mrs. L. Dodson.

Memphis Bank Sues Bonding Companies For About $500,000

Memphis, Tenn., March 4.—Basing its claim on alleged fraudulent transactions of one of its former vice presidents, Robert S. Polk, who committed suicide recently, and J. Ramsey Beauchamp, said to be a cotton broker in New York now, the Union and Planters' Bank and Trust company of Memphis today filed suit involving approximately $500,000 in chancery court against the Globe Indemnity company of New York and the Fidelity and Deposit company of Maryland.

The bank claims losses approximating $750,000 and is suing the companies which were on Polk's and Beauchamp's bonds for $500,000, the amount of their bonds, plus a penalty of 25 per cent allowed by law in Tennessee for contested bonds, and interest from the time the first claim was made.

The Union and Planters' Bank and Trust company was reorganized last fall and the losses were written off the books. The bank now has resources of about $250,000.

The Federal Reserve bank, of which the Union and Planters' is a member, conducted an investigation of the alleged irregularities in 1924, and the findings of its representatives were turned over to the United States department of justice. After the bank of the latter branch of the government had concluded their work, a report was made to S. E. Murray, United States district attorney.

The bank claims that the accounts of both Beauchamp and Polk were audited by adjusters of the two bonding companies, and that they never denied their liability, according to the bank. They have failed to pay the indemnity, the bill charges, and the bank sets up a claim of 25 per cent as payment for the trouble of collecting the claim through the courts.

10 WORKMEN DEAD AFTER EXPLOSION IN GERMAN SHOPS

Wittenberg, Germany, March 4.—Ten workmen are dead following a tremendous explosion in the factory of the Aschauer company, according to an official report of the company officials. The blast shook the plant while the full morning shift was at work.

Employees of the company insist that the officials are underestimating the number of dead. These unofficial authorities put the loss of life at more than 20 and possibly as high as 30.

About 20 men were seriously injured and great material damage was caused.
